TREATY IS TAKEN UP IN SENATE

Lodge's Motion for Reconsideration Prevails by Vote of 63 to 9

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Reconsideration of the peace treaty was agreed on by a majority of the Senate this afternoon.

A motion by Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, providing for a suspension of the Senate rules to permit a reconsideration, was adopted by a coalition of Republicans and Democratic senators favoring ratification.

A rollcall was made necessary to secure the adoption of the motion when Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, objected to unanimous consent for a suspension of the rules.

Senator Lodge stated it was his purpose to have the treaty recommitted to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to free it from the reservations still attached to discussion of it.

The vote by which Senator Lodge's motion was carried was 63 to 9. The motion was to be instructed to committee was to be instructed to report it back to the Senate promptly. It was expected it would do so tomorrow. Unlimited debate would then follow unless the Senate decided to again invoke cloture.

Senator Lodge's action brought the treaty before the Senate again for the first time since ratification was

Big Trawler Settles Deep in Mud

The steam trawler Pelican, which sank in the dock at T Wharf last Saturday, has settled eight feet into the mud and is badly listed. The diver who is preparing the hull to be raised reported today that the mud would have to be removed before slings could be put under her.

Her cargo of fresh fish, worth about $5,000, will probably have to be sold to glue factories or fertilizer works.

The diver reported that the hole in the hull, made by ice in the narrows, is about two feet long and four inches wide. The Scott Wrecking Company estimated that the job of raising will take about a week.

DEMANDS 4 P. C. BEER HERE

Public Opinion League Asks for Action by the Legislature

Joseph J. Leonard, chairman of the Massachusetts Public Opinion League, today demanded the State Legislature pass a bill legalizing 4 per cent. beer.

Mr. Leonard declared the State had this right under the prohibition amendment. He said such action would be a fitting answer to the "brazen assumption of State rights by Congress."

The demand was made at a series of hearings before the legislative committee on law, which is considering eight bills legalizing beer, ale and wine of either 2.75 or 4 per cent. alcoholic strength. The same is considering a bill offered by J. Frank Chase of the Watch and Ward Society, placing restrictions on the sale of Jamaica ginger.

Mr. Leonard said that his organization was instrumental in getting a referendum on 4 per cent. beer at the last election, under the Public Opinion Act. He declared that the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of 4 per cent. beer in 179 representative and nine senatorial districts, and that this was an even more popular issue than the "law and order" fight of Governor Coolidge.

Five hundred men and women were present when the hearing began. Organized labor and the Anti-Saloon League were well represented. Among the eight bills being considered is the "2.75 initiative" petition fathered by union labor in Massachusetts.

FOSDICK'S RULINGS DISPUTED

Counsel for Freeman File Exceptions to Action of Divorce Judge

Ernest B. Freeman, whose wife, Margaret Reed Freeman, was recently granted a divorce, today took steps to have the findings of Judge Frederick Fosdick set aside.

His attorneys, Gaston, Snow, Saltonstall & Hunt, filed exceptions to the refusal of Judge Fosdick to grant certain rulings during the trial.

The $25,000 a year manager of the Sturtevant Blower Works bitterly contested his wife's suit and indications are that the struggle is not yet over.

If possible the exceptions will be put into shape for argument during the March term of the Supreme Court. If they are not ready it will not be until October that they are heard.

Judge Fosdick, in rendering his decision, announced a decree nisi for Mrs. Freeman on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. The heiress to $750,000 had declared that by word and act her husband had been cruel and abusive to her.

The Court supported her testimony

Sudden Thaw Sets In; Flood Is Feared

A rising temperature, accompanied by a thaw, scheduled to last through tomorrow, struck Boston today and greatly facilitated the work of relieving storm conditions.

Fear is felt that if the thaw is sudden the sewers will become choked and the flood will overflow cellars and back up into the streets.

Throughout Greater Boston steam and electric service was restored almost to normal but passenger and freight transportation is still suffering from the effects of the blizzard.

Service on the New Haven road, which is not expected to become normal before the middle of the week, sustained a setback when the locomotive of the first Braintree to Boston train left the rails. This occurred near the School street bridge in Quincy, tieing up train service to Braintree, Quincy, Quincy Adams, Wollaston and Norfolk Downs for hours.

No one was injured and special trolley cars were run to care for the passengers.

One Dead, 18 Hurt in San Francisco Fire

By International News Service.

San Francisco, Feb. 9.—A fire in which many narrowly escaped death and in which but one unidentified woman is known to have been killed, destroyed a fashionable apartment hotel here early today. First reports were to the effect that many had been killed, but a careful check revealed but one person dead.

Missing persons, estimated at between ten and fifteen, were not believed dead, as no hospital or morgue or residence has reported such deaths. Because they were scantily clad, it is believed by fire and police officials that they took refuge in other apartments or hotels and will be accounted for during the day.

The fire broke out shortly after midnight in the Berkshire Apartments. The blaze spread rapidly. An explosion at one time tore a portion of the roof from the apartment and, it was thought, threw timbers on the heads of occupants of the fourth floor of the apartment house. Many were injured at this time, but none believed dangerously. The total number of injured was said today to be eighteen.

De Valera Unaware of Boston Invitation

"I know nothing at all about coming to Boston on February 15. I have never even heard of an invitation to be in Boston on that date. The only invitation to visit Boston I know of was one to be there March 17. I would have liked to be in Boston St. Patrick's Day, because that was the day the British were driven from Boston. Unfortunately a prior engagement to attend a function of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick will prevent my so doing. But that I was even expected in Boston February 15 is news to me."

This was President Eamon De Valera's reply when shown a report that Mayor Andrew J. Peters had decided he would not officially greet him in this city February 15.

SEEK WOMAN AS MASTER MIND

Solitude Police Believe Amateur Thieves Have Cave in Woods

Solitude, Feb. 9.—A woman raffles, believed to be the master mind of a band of amateur thieves, was sought by the police today in connection with an entrance into the home and store of M. G. Severns.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to open the safe, but the burglars were forced to flee without securing anything of value. Mrs. Severns, who is eighty, and a woman friend, were the only occupants of the house, which is connected with the store. The house was ransacked.

Tracks in the snow and a woman's glove, found in the store, led the police to believe that the head of the thieving expedition was a woman. Because of the crudeness manifested in attempting to open the safe, the burglars were believed to be amateurs. The police are searching for their cache which is thought may be a snow covered cave in the woods.

Men Storm Kentucky Courthouse Where Negro Has Been Sentenced to Chair

By International News Service.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 9.—Immediately following the trial and sentence to electrocution on March 11 of William Lockett, negro, confessed assailant and murderer of 10-year-old Geneva Hardman, near here, the courtroom became a scene of great confusion today.

Men with a rope attempted to storm the courthouse door and lynch the negro. State troops under command of Captain L. V. Crockett opened fire and several persons were reported to have been killed and a number of others wounded.

Lockett was brought here on a special train from the State penitentiary at Frankfort, where he was sent February 4, after confession of the crime, to prevent lynching.

Lexington's streets were packed when the negro, surrounded by the troops, marched to the courthouse. Wires and ropes had been stretched on either side of each street through which Lockett was to pass, and troops were under orders to "shoot to kill" if an attempt was made to capture the prisoner.

The crime occurred near the Hardman home. The child was on her way to school when attacked and beaten to death with a stone.

disciplinary and other advantages which such a system plainly promises for the young men of the country."

WILSON'S LETTER.

The President's letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Secretary:

"I am told that a caucus of the Democratic members of the House of Representatives had been called to consider pending military legislation, and that the suggestion has been made that a resolution be adopted committing the Democratic membership of the House against the policy of general military training.

"In the present circumstances, it would seem to me unfortunate to make a party issue upon this subject, particularly since within a few months the party will assemble in convention and declare the principles upon which it deems it wise to commit itself in a national election.

APPROVED TRAINING PROJECT

"The present disturbed state of the world business does not permit such measures with regard to America's obligations as to allow us lightly to decide upon this great question upon purely military grounds, while the demobilization of large numbers of the country which come from military service in the war plainly suggests that in the national interest, quite apart from purely military considerations, a moderate and carefully conducted course of universal training ought to have the highest possible advantages.

"In our discussion of this subject you will recall I gave my approval in principle to the very moderate training project suggested by the general staff, and I would be very glad to have you convey to appropriate members of the House who will attend the caucus my strong feeling against action by the caucus, which will tend to interpose an arbitrary party determination to the consideration which this subject should receive from the best thought of the members of the House, considering alike the national emergencies which may confront us and the great disciplinary and other advantages which a system plainly promises for the young men of the country.

"Cordially and sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

$500 Cash Prize and 100 Medals for School Children

The Boston American Will Award Them for the Best Essays Written for Abraham Lincoln's Birthday Celebration

Attention, school children! Here is an important message for you:

Here is how you may compete for $500 in cash, the first prize, and the 100 silver medals the American offers:

The awards will be made to the writers of the best essays on the relations of the leading European nations towards the United States during Lincoln's time and—

The lesson of his words and his attitude on these situations applying to our time—to America and Americans today!

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

Each essay must not contain more than 1,000 words.

All essays must be in the American office by February 9.

Address the envelope to LINCOLN EDITOR, the Boston American, 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass.

The contest is open to school children of all ages and class rank. The age and class rank will be taken into consideration by the judges in deciding the winners. More will be expected of the older and higher grade children than the younger and lower grade children.

The idea will count as much as the phraseology. But clearness and directness of style will be expected from all contributors.

PURPOSES OF THE CONTEST.

The whole plan is to bring home to everybody in this great country the necessity of their living by the slogan AMERICA FIRST.

Americans must know what attitude European nations have had towards our country in the important crises of our history.

Let young Americans show those growing into citizenship with them and the older folk why we cannot depend upon European friendship or upon the attitude of any European nation as permanent.

Any one of the nations of Europe may be friendly towards us today, and any one, or all of them, may be hostile tomorrow.

America must depend upon itself, upon the spirit of its own people, the wealth and resources of its own country, the power of its own arms, and the independence and self-reliance of its own government.

In a phrase—AMERICA FIRST!

And, remember, your essays must be in the American office by today, when the $500 cash prize and 100 medals contest ends.

Cabot Says Parents Are Best Educators

Judge Frederick P. Cabot, speaking on child welfare, at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, declared that "parents are the best educators of children." His lecture was the first of several to be given at meetings for "Social Democracy," the diocesan committee of the Episcopal church's nation-wide campaign. "The state interferes when there is a failure on the part of the parent to give the child opportunity for education and development," he stated.

"But a child always belongs to its family, and no court should take it away from the family if there is a reasonable opportunity for development. Judge Cabot spoke of the plan and scope and work of the Boston Juvenile Court over which he presides, and also of the Judge Baker Foundation. He declared that it is not its purpose to put a label on a child, but to find out the capabilities and abilities of the child, intellectually and in character.

FINDS THRIFT IN MIDDLE CLASS

Women Are Doing the Most Toward Saving, Declares Mrs. Irving Palmer

"The middle class women are today practicing thrift, while the young factory workmen are spending more than they ever spent before."

This was the declaration of Mrs. Irvink Palmer, who spoke on thrift today at the Brightheimstone Club of Brighton and Allston in an all-day conference of women's clubs.

"Thrift is not a war-time virtue. Spendthrift America, however, has become economical America. The middle class of organized women can and must use their influence to make the other classes save. The real thrift is not just saving, it is the use of time, money and strength to make the most possible of them. Thrift is the good use of all of the whole business of living."

"Our own rules . . . are simple. It is the things spent for other people's eyes that count."

Mrs. Palmer referred to the money expended for automobiles, 75 per cent. of which are purchased on the instalment plan, and 90 per cent. of which carry mortgages. She defined riches as having what you want; to be able to go without what you want is poverty.

Mrs. Schuyler F. Herron, speaking on household expenses, urged the women to keep accounts, make budgets of expenses and apportion some definite part for saving.

Miss May Bliss Dickenson addressed the meeting of the thrift of child life. She stated that the mortality record for children has discredited our former reliance on "mother instinct."

Educate "Reds," Says Gov. Harding

Chicago, Feb. 9.—A plea for less governmental regulation and a campaign of education to combat extreme radicalism was made by Governor W. L. Harding of Iowa in an address at the Elks' Club here.

"The tendency of this country for the last ten or fifteen years," said the Governor, "has been to incumber our law books with a large number of regulating statutes.

"The best way to tackle our economic unrest and to meet the 'Reds' in their attempt to Russianize America is to carry on an aggressive campaign of education, telling the people of our institutions and the rights and privileges of the individual citizen under our form of government."

League Big Issue in Missouri Election

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The League of Nations next Saturday will be submitted to a "solemn referendum" in the Third Congressional District of Missouri, when Democrats and Republicans will go to the polls in an election of a representative to Congress succeeding Judge Joshua W. Alexander, appointed a member of President Wilson's Cabinet.

The League has been made the paramount issue in this election and nationally prominent speakers have stumped the district.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson, Republican candidate for the presidential nomination, and Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer, Democratic presidential possibility, both have visited Missouri for the purpose of influencing the election.

If a Republican should be elected to represent the Third District in the House of Representatives it would be a blow to those who hold the people are in favor of a League of Nations.

Sergeant Horton searched the house on Zeigler street, looking for liquor and found 1,000 cigars valued at $300 in Gayer's room, and also a policeman's badge.

A Letter From Parfumerie ED. PINAUD To American Men and Women

Making the Present Defer to the Future

ESTABLISHED for a century with headquarters in Paris and a general agency in New York, we have had within the last two years a large increase in the demand for ED. PINAUD'S Dental Cream, Loria Powder, Brilliantine, ED. PINAUD'S Eau de Quinine Hair Tonic and Lilac Vegetal.

Believing that in prosperous times the wisest policy would be to build for the future, we decided to retain a low level of prices on our goods, although a large increase would have been justified. We knew that by refraining from profiteering and by judicious advertising of the superior quality of the ED. PINAUD'S preparations, we could become more firmly established than ever in the esteem of the American public.

We now advise our friends that we do not intend to raise prices during the next six months, although conditions would warrant making our prices double what they were before the war. By increasing our production and proceeding on the principle of small profits and large sales, it has been necessary to increase our prices only 35% since the war began.

We want more than ever to have the name ED. PINAUD stand for fair dealing and to cultivate a genuinely friendly feeling toward our house and our merchandise, by pledging not to increase prices except when it becomes an absolute necessity.

We feel that the fine old word "trustworthy" justly applies to the ED. PINAUD preparations. You can rely thoroughly upon their merit. They are guaranteed to contain no wood alcohol or other injurious ingredients, and have been approved in every respect by the authorities. What is even more important, they have retained the esteem of the American public for over 60 years because of their QUALITY. This fact we deeply appreciate and assure our friends we will keep faith with them.

WOMAN IS REFUSED LICENSE

Earle Ellingwood Seeks a Divorce, Which Has Not Yet Been Granted

Mrs. Louise Ellingwood, twenty-four, was refused a marriage license today on the novel ground that her husband objected.

Sensational developments are expected in the case, one of the queerest the city registrar's office has come across in some time.

Mrs. Ellingwood lives at No. 78 Worcester street. She made application last week for a license to marry Elbridge M. Rust, 22, of the same address. Rust is an ex-policeman.

Earle Ellingwood of No. 47 Converse avenue, Malden, received notice of the intentions of his wife in the papers and promptly complained to Joseph A. Cohalan of the registrar's office.

Ellingwood filed suit for divorce from his wife on August 5 last. The publication of the marriage intentions of Mrs. Ellingwood and Rust gave the bride-to-be as divorced, with "papers to come." City officials believe that Mrs. Ellingwood honestly thought that her husband had secured his divorce, which was sought on grounds of infidelity.

The marriage of Ellingwood and his wife, then Miss Louise Flurick of Malden, was a "Sunday school romance." Both were active in church affairs. Ellingwood served nineteen months with the Yankee Division, and it was on alleged acts by his wife while he was away that he based his divorce suit.

PLEA FOR CAPITAL MADE BY PROFESSOR SKINNER

Professor Clarence R. Skinner of Tufts College defended the necessity of the capitalist system in industry and economics, defining its fourfold function, before the Brotherhood Forum in Emmons Hall, Wells Memorial building.

He declared that capital functions to effect production, makes for foresight in production, maintains oversight in production and builds up a surplus which last is very necessary in times of industrial stress.

GILLETT SAYS PRACTICE THRIFT OR SUFFER PANIC

Springfield, Feb. 9.—The greatest financial crisis in the history of the United States is confronting the nation and the high cost of living is due to the inflated condition, resulting from floating $4,000,000,000 in Treasury certificates, Congressman Frederick Gillett, Speaker of the House, told an audience of 5,000 persons in this city.

Unless the people practice thrift he predicted a panic similar to the one which occurred in 1893.

He was eighty-four years old, a native of Ireland and lived in Milford a half century.

Look Out! That Planet May Bump Into Us!

New York, Feb. 9.—We are liable to be bumped off this globe most any time through collision with one or more invisible planets, so close to us that some person on one of them threw a stone at us some time ago. The stone, carved with hieroglyphics, landed somewhere in France.

Here is what Charles Fort, "Cosmographer" and author, said today, after explaining that recent wireless disturbances may have been the result of efforts of some inhabited planet, Venus, Mars, or one of the non-luminous planets nearby, to communicate with the earth:

"There is a large mass of data which points to the fact there are planets within a few hundred miles, some within fifty miles, of our earth's surface. For example, there have been many unexplained eclipses which coincided with earthquakes.

"A carved stone which was found at Tarbes, France, in June, 1887, must admittedly have fallen from the sky, because it was coated with ice. This stone, which was as small as an ordinary 10-cent piece, had carving upon it which was distinctly a form of hieroglyphia and therefore interpretable.

"Members of the French Academy declared that a whirlwind had carried the stone from some other part of the earth. But nobody found any trace of a whirlwind at the time, and the more reasonable supposition is that it was an effort of some planet close by to communicate with the earth in this direct fashion."

ASSERTS INDUSTRY HAS KEPT "JUNGLE LAWS"

Rev. Edward Cummings, speaking at the South Congregational Church, asserted that America has made her industrial life just as industrial militancy. He contended that in our industries "we've kept our jungle laws."

Legislators in national and State legislative bodies were praised by Rev. Mr. Cummings for "trying to introduce measures which will put the spirit of the Living Creature into our industries." His sermon topic was "The Spirit Within the Wheels."

SUTHERLAND MAY BE NEW IRISH VICEROY

London, Feb. 8.—There is increasing evidence that a change in the government of Ireland is inevitable. The Manchester Guardian makes the statement that a popular Irish peer has been offered the appointment as Viceroy to succeed Viscount French, but has declined to accept. Sir William Sutherland, however, is said to have signified his willingness to accept appointment as Chief Secretary to succeed Ian Macpherson.

STRIKING WEAVERS TO RETURN AT NEW BEDFORD

New Bedford, Feb. 9. — With only the promise that they "would be taken care of," the Nashawena Mill weavers, out on strike for the last two weeks, were to return to work today, following a union vote. The union loom fixers remain out. The weavers joined the strike of the fixers, asserting that they could not earn a living wage because of the shortage of fixers.

THIEVES LOOT EXPRESS CARTS

Organized Gang at Work in Boston; Losses Run Into Thousands

An organized band of express thieves is reaping a rich harvest in Boston, according to Lawrence J. Welch, head of the Expressmen's Protective League, and losses running into the thousands have occurred within the last few weeks.

Prisoners taken by the police admit that they are accustomed to patrol certain beats in the business section of the city, where they find a bale or bundles which fill wagons standing along the curb. Others infest the railroad terminals and make their getaway with packages taken from baggage trucks.

TO REMOVE POISONOUS DUST FROM FACTORIES

Niagara Falls, Feb. 9.—As a result of a survey made by the Public Health Service here, hygiene engineers have devised means of removing dust from the air of factories, and minimizing hazards from fumes and poisonous gases. It was estimated that in the past over 200,000,000 tiny particles of dust, as sharp as ground glass, were breathed into the lungs and air passages with every cubic foot of air in some of the factories.

BEVERLY POLICEMAN SEEKS REINSTATEMENT

Beverly, Feb. 9.—The question of reinstating Patrolman Ernest I. Ellis of the Beverly police force, who was suspended on January 15 by Chief Tucker and Mayor McPherson for alleged refusal to patrol his beat, will come up for a hearing before the Board of Aldermen this week. Ellis wants his job back, and a two-thirds vote of the board is necessary to get it.

The Spiker-Knowles Marriage Service

Standing before Guy S. Spiker and Emily Knowles, in the old-fashioned parlor of the Batterseys in Fall River, Rev. Henry A. Arnold began:

"You are now standing at this marriage altar, where you are about to enter upon one of the most solemn and at the same time the most happy relationships of life. If with confident trust in each other you determine to accept each other as companions for better or worse, to go life's journey together, you will acknowledge this decision for union of hearts by taking each by the hand."

The couple clasped hands, and in low but distinct voices answered in the affirmative the following question:

"Do you Emily (Guy) take Guy (Emily) whom you hold by the hand to be your true husband (wife), to love, honor and cherish him (her), in joy or pain in sickness or health, and, forsaking all others, to cleave to him (her), only so long as you both shall live?"

Guy then produced the ring, at the minister's request, and, holding the little gold circlet in his hand, the clergyman continued:

"This circlet of precious metal is justly regarded as a fitting emblem of the purity and perpetuity of the marriage state. The ancients were reminded by the circle of eternity, as it is so fashioned as to have neither beginning nor end, while gold is so incorruptible that it cannot be tarnished by use or time. So may the union at this time solemnized be incorruptible in its purity and more lasting than time itself."

ceremony. All others were barred out and they knocked and hammered in vain, attempting to gain entrance.

At 1:40, the Rev. Mr. Arnold put in an appearance, after his church and Sunday school classes were dismissed. Spending a minute or two in coaching the couple, the entire party moved into the parlor.

It was noticeable that none of the Batterseby family took part in the wedding. A son-in-law and a daughter-in-law did the honors. Mrs. Batterseby remained seated all through the ceremony. Her husband was in another part of the house.

Guy Spiker stood up to be married with the same grin which he has exhibited ever since coming into the case, the same grin which has been reproduced in newspapers throughout the country.

In striking contrast was the face of Emily Knowles, who maintained a look of serious indifference throughout.

MARRIED AT BATTERSBY HOME.

The couple were married Sunday by the Rev. Henry A. Arnold of the Bogle Street Christian Church of this city at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Batterseby. The best man was Charles Whitehead, son-in-law of Mrs. Batterseby, and the bridesmaid was Mrs. Sarah Batterseby, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Batterseby.

The others present included Mrs. Batterseby, William Batterseby, Jr., Mrs. Charles Whitehead, who held in her arms Alfred Ray Spiker, Emily's son, Miss Mary Whitehead, five reporter and a motion picture man.

Guy arrived at the home of Assistant City Clerk Joseph F. Delahanty, No. 192 North Main street, at 10:02 Sunday morning, and asked for his marriage license. He was given the license without any delay and rode back in a taxi to the Batterseby home, where his betrothed awaited his coming.

ASKED TO KISS BRIDE.

On the way to the Batterseby home Guy stopped to buy some cigarettes at a drug store and telephoned to ask if the New York boats were running. He was told that they were not running and then inquired about the trains for Monday.

A drug clerk asked him if he would bring down his blushing bride and let the people there kiss her for luck, as the expectant bridegroom replied that he would do so on his next trip to Fall River after he had done a little kissing on his own hook.

About 12:30 a chosen few of the reporters, those who had contributed toward a silver loving cup for Baby Alfred on Saturday, were admitted to the house and later witnessed the

RULES BRADBURY SHOULD SERVE

Elections Committee Reports Against Harvey in Winthrop Contest

Charles D. Bradbury will represent Winthrop in the Legislature if the House of Representatives accepts the report of the Committee on Elections. The report was made following a lengthy hearing on the contest made by C. Joseph Harvey of Winthrop, whom Bradbury defeated by 1214 votes to 1,161 votes, running on stickers.

Harvey, represented by Homer Albers, contended that the use of the word Republican on the stickers was illegal, inasmuch as he, Harvey, was the nominee; that the stickers were distributed illegally, that the type used was not of the size required by law and that the stickers were in some instances pasted over Harvey's name.

The committee ruled that the intent of the voters should prevail. It was apparent, the committee contended, that the majority of the voters favored Bradbury against Harvey.

The committee found that the use of the word Republican was not prohibited by any existing statute; that the statute regulating the size of type is directory, not mandatory; that the distribution of stickers within 150 feet of the polling places does not invalidate the election, and that the pasting of stickers over Harvey's name indicated the intent of the voter to vote for someone other than Harvey.

the last named community an influenza epidemic is raging.

The New Haven re-established communication with the Cape today, but its service was spasmodic in other places, with no attempt to maintain schedules.

The Boston & Albany reported its service to be normal, and the Boston & Maine about fifteen minutes behind its schedules.

PLOWS OPEN LINES.

Hough's Neck and Squantum were in touch with civilization for the first time since Thursday, while hundreds of shovelers and twenty big plows opened lines in and around Salem.

The Elevated resumed service on all lines today, but the Eastern Massachusetts was running no cars in Dedham, Braintree or Milton.

Narrow Gauge service to Winthrop and Lynn, while reliable, was not normal, as only one track was open to Winthrop, by way of the centre. Between Crescent Beach and Lynn also only one track was open, necessitating the operation of shuttle trains. Gangs of men were busy shoveling away the snow, and it was expected that pre-storm conditions would be re-established by night.

SHORTAGE OF CARS.

There was a shortage of cars in East Boston, due to defective motors, it was stated, and the service in South Boston was not as good as before the storm. Other sections of Greater Boston, however, reported cars running nearly on schedule.

The Cape Cod Canal was once more open to shipping, and electric light service was partially restored in Cape towns.

Several school and college girls marooned in Nantasket suffered from exposure as a result of their attempts to walk to their homes in nearby villages.

South Boston Traffic Conditions Improved

Traffic conditions in South Boston today were greatly improved, but street car service today was irregular and hundreds of persons were herded into the open space on the upper level of the terminal at Broadway and Dorchester avenue.

At this point there is no protection from weather conditions for passengers awaiting cars for the North Station, Essex street and other points.

General Street Traffic in New York Is Stopped

New York, Feb. 9.—For the first time in history, the vehicular street traffic of all New York was at a standstill today by official order. Despairing of getting the streets cleared of snow and ice by regular methods, Mayor Hylan ordered an embargo on all trucking and traffic except that handling milk, foodstuffs, coal, snow and newspapers.

Snow is banked in some streets as high as ten feet. There has been practically no surface car traffic for three days.

Snow Delays All Cape Cod Trains

Sandwich, Feb. 9. — Cape Cod is finding it no mean task to dig itself out of the drifts created by the storm. Every available man is at work on the frozen highways. All trains are delayed. Yesterday no trains or papers were sent over the Woods Hole line.

Shipping is at a standstill, with the exception of a few tugs making their way through the main canal. The mine-sweeper and ice-breaker "Owl" is expected to attempt to break up the ice-packs in lower Buzzard's Bay.

The coast guard patrol is facing the worst conditions in its history of more than fifty years. An ice-barrier would prevent the launching of boats or breeches-buoy in the event of a wreck.

FOURTH OF TOWN ILL WITH GRIP

Isolated Cummington's Medicinal Supplies Are Exhausted; Appeal to Red Cross

Northampton, Feb. 9.—With only two exhausted doctors to attend one-quarter of the town's population, stricken by an epidemic of influenza, storm isolated Cummington, twenty miles northwest of this city, without medical supplies and facing a food shortage, has sent an urgent appeal to the Northampton Red Cross for succor.

One hundred and sixty-one fully developed cases of influenza have been reported and several cases of pneumonia have been listed.

The Red Cross obtained a pair of heavy horses and loaded a sled with provisions and medicine. Arrangements have been made to obtain a relay of horses and the relief party is now on the way to the stricken community. A second relief sled was started for the town today. It is hoped that they will be able to break through the heavy drifts and unbroken roads leading to the town.

SILVER CUP PRESENTED DRILLERS AT FORE RIVER

General Manager S. W. Wakeman of the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation has presented to the S. E. department of the Quincy works a silver cup as first prize in the accident prevention contest, conducted during the six months ending January 1. During the drive the metal drillers, who won the prize, reduced the number of accidents 23.89 per cent. The loss of time through accidents was reduced 64 per cent by the S. E. men during the same time.

Lawrence, Feb. 9.—The roof of the car barn was crushed in by the weight of the accumulation of snow. "Upon the undisputed evidence any marital offence committed by the libellee was condoned by the libellant before the filing of the libel.

"There is no evidence to warrant a finding that the libellee ever made accusations or charges against his wife without reasonable and probable cause for believing them to be true.

"It is a general rule of practice that it is not ordinarily fit or proper to grant a divorce upon the uncorroborated testimony of the libellant."

Barnetts Keep Their 'Unwelcome' Baby

San Francisco, Feb. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Barnett, whose admittedly undesired baby was advertised unsuccessfully for adoption more than two months before its birth, have changed their minds. Now that the baby has been born they have decided they will keep him.

The Barnetts already had two children and regarded that number as plenty. A storm of indignant criticism followed the advertisement and the news stories which grew out of it. Big all the criticism was not unfavorable. Disapproval was preponderant, however, and the Barnetts felt the adverse criticism so keenly that when the baby was born Saturday they refused for a time to have anything to say concerning it.

VERMONT MAY LOSE ONE CONGRESSMAN

Burlington, Vt., Feb. 9.—The probable loss of one Vermont Congressman is indicated in unofficial reports by Federal census enumerators.

This would leave this Commonwealth but a single Representative in the lower branch of the Federal Legislature.

25 RESCUED IN SEA TRAGEDY

British Liner Goes Down; U. S. Tug Helpless, and French Boat Without Rudder

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 9.—The British steamer Bradboyne is reported sunk in mid-ocean. News of the disaster was received here in wireless messages from vessels which picked up members of her crew.

A radio dispatch from the steamer Monmouth declares she has rescued two of the Bradboyne's crew and that the Ozonia has saved twenty-three. The fate of the rest of the crew is unknown.

Two other vessels are in peril, according to a message from the Mauretania.

The American tug Berwick is in distress in Latitude 42.50 North Longitude East and the French steamer Vancouver is lying rudderless over 400 miles from Halifax and 100 miles south of the trans-Atlantic route.

"The Price of One Tire for God!"

"We were going over our family budget for the year," said a well-to-do business man to his pastor.

"Suddenly I looked up at my wife with a gasp of astonishment.

"'Do you see what we have done?' I exclaimed. "For amusement and the automobile we have allotted ten times as much as we are planning to give to the church and charities. I never realized it before."

What they had set aside for benevolence would just about buy one new automobile tire.

The price of one tire—for God!

SOVIETS EAGER FOR PEACE

Russian Leaders Doubtful of French Sincerity in Lifting Blockade

(Note: A cabled request by Universal Service for an authoritative Soviet statement on the supreme council's decision to lift the blockade of Bolshevist Russia, under certain conditions, has brought the subjoined reply by the active head of the Soviet diplomatic service.—Universal Service.)

By MAXIM LITVINOFF

Special Cable Dispatch to Universal Service.

Copenhagen, Feb. 9.—The decision of the Paris Supreme Court regarding the blockade of Russia was certainly the first breach in the Chinese wall erected around Russia by the Allies. It was the inevitable outcome of the combined efforts of the Red army of the working people in other countries. Access to Russia has been an economic necessity of the whole world.

OFFERS NO OPINION.

I offer no opinion on the effect which the Paris decision may have on Russia itself. We have, as yet, only a paper declaration, still to be translated into deeds. Besides, the decision itself to lift the blockade was made with certain reservations, possibly intended to frustrate its effect.

I refer to the mention of the co-operative societies as the only channel for trade. I see in this an attempt to inforce upon Soviet Russia certain changes in its economic system.

The Russian government may or may not find it convenient to do foreign business through the Russian co-operative societies, which are now working in full harmony with the other Soviet institutions; but it naturally would resent having its choice of agencies dictated from without, or a monopoly bestowed on a certain group of Russians.

That is not the only reservation in my mind. I cannot admit that trade can be satisfactorily carried on between countries not fully and mutually represented and without free postal and telegraphic intercourse. If the Paris decision does not imply such intercourse it may be of little use to Russia or the world.

VITAL POINTS AT STAKE.

But I come now to even more vital points. The most important routes to Central Europe and former Russian seaports are now in control of the newly formed border States, whose independence is recognized by the Soviet government.

If these States are permitted by the allies to follow the demands of their own people and the dictators of their own interests, and to conclude final peace with Russia, the use of these routes and ports will certainly not be denied. But if the allies continue their present policy of compelling the border States to remain in a state of hostility, they will, in effect, still be blockading Russia.

The so-called lifting of the blockade will be less effective if Clemenceau's policy of inciting Poland and other States to wage war against Russia is persisted in. For, although no great efforts will be required to repulse their attacks and to teach them prudence, it will mean that military requirements will still have the priority over economic development.

SEES NO OBSTACLE TO PEACE.

The importance of the Allied Supreme Council's recent decision to lift the blockade has depended upon the sincerity of its intention, which is still open to question, and of the Allies' general policy toward Russia. If, as we are given to understand, this remains unchanged, then the declaration was merely lip-service to a popular demand.

I see no obstacle to peace with Russia in the Soviet government's Asiatic policy. Lord Northcliffe and Winston Churchill have been trying to frighten the British with accounts of "the enemy" approaching the borders of the British Empire. Then why did not they accept the offer of peace which "the enemy" made and obtain guarantees for the removal of that menace, instead of increasing its hostility and contemplating a new war upon it?

Soviet Russia has shown itself to possess weapons to blunt the weapons of capitalist countries. She will use them to the hilt as long as she is compelled to fight, but she is only longing to stop fighting and to turn her attention to her own affairs.

'DEADWOOD DICK' IS DEAD

Famous Dime Novel Hero and Terror of Road Agents Passes Away in California

By Universal Service.

Los Angeles, Feb. 9.—"Deadwood Dick" has cashed in. And he did not die with his boots on.

Richard Bullock, known from one end of the world to the other as "Deadwood Dick," is dead at the Thorncroft Sanitarium, Glendale, after an illness of three weeks. He was taken to the sanitarium three days ago.

Stranger than fiction was the life of the quiet man of iron nerve and lion heart. Thousands of books have been written, telling of deeds of bravery in which the great hero rounded up and herded outlaws, stage robbers and other bad men.

Richard Bullock was born in Cornwall, England, seventy-five to eighty years ago. He came to this country at the age of twenty-one. He first showed up in the Black Hills when about thirty-five years of age. For a short time he engaged in the mining business. While thus engaged, stages running from the Black Hills to the settlements were being robbed with such regularity that miners almost despaired of ever getting their shipments through the lines of outlaws.

Richard Bullock quit mining. He buckled a gun to his side and said he was going after the road agents.

Bullock was one of the famous Home Stake Mining Company's bullion guards. The mine was owned by the late Senator George Hearst, father of William Randolph Hearst.

Mr. Bullock is survived by a son and a number of grand-children, who live in Cornwall, England. He was a member of the Lead, S. D., lodge of Odd Fellows, and friends telegraphed the lodge to ascertain what arrangements should be made for the funeral.

FRANKLIN SQ. HOUSE MAKES APPEAL BY MAIL

More than 10,000 letters are being sent out today and tomorrow to friends and well wishers of the Franklin Square House by the clean-up campaign organization under Miss Vera Chace. The object of the big mail is to urge every person interested in "Boton's Biggest Mother," under which name the house has been long known, to dig for the last intensive fund raising campaign which in all probability, Dr. George L. Perin, president of the house, states, it will ever be necessary to make.

CHAMPIONS VACCINATION IN LECTURE AT HARVARD

The necessity of vaccination as a means of protecting the individual and the community from smallpox was emphasized by Dr. Edwin H. Place, physician in charge of the Boston City Hospital, in the second of the series of free Sunday afternoon lectures at the Harvard Medical School, Longwood avenue. The doctor presented a formidable array of pathological and statistical evidence against the case of those, who ask for legislation that would repeal or make ineffective the vaccination law.

FUNERAL OF ROSCOE Y. CONKLIN TOMORROW

Mr. Conklin was graduated from McGill University at Montreal, came to Boston, entered the employ of the Massachusetts Lighting Company as a gas engineer and he had been with the company continuously.

ZIONIST PREDICTS NEAR COMING OF THE MESSIAH

That Messiah is soon coming to redeem Israel and to restore Zion is the statement made by Abraham Alpert, noted Jewish orator and publicist, at the Zionist demonstration held Sunday evening in the assembly hall of the Fletcher School, Elm street, Cambridge. Edward Cohen presided. Rabbi A. Gorovits and Robert Silverman also spoke. Rev. Samuel Kanio sang Jewish folk songs.

"This just hits my hungry spot!"

A real breakfast for a real boy

Bond Bread toast and milk—

HE knows what tastes good! He's a real boy—with a boy's appetite and a boy's love of "regular" food that is food.

Such boys and girls are keen critics of bread, above all else.

As long as they say Bond Bread "hits the spot"—it's sure to satisfy grown-ups, too.

Bond Bread was made for growing boys and little girls.

When your judges chose those prize-winning loaves from which Bond Bread was to be copied and patterned,—

They pictured the better, purer bread that boys and girls needed for their health's sake.

So—when you enjoy your crisp, tender Bond Bread toast (and Bond Bread does make wonderfully tasty toast!)—

Just imagine you're a boy or a girl again—and eat heartily.

Bond Bread is patterned after the prize-winning home-made loaves selected by your judges in the Bond Bread Baking Contest.

Bond Bread is so named because each loaf bears this bond of the General Baking Company.

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS THAT GENERAL BAKING COMPANY IS HELD AND FIRMLY BOUND UNTO THE PURCHASER OF THIS LOAF OF Bond Bread Wrapped this U.S. DAY OF AND HEREBY WARRANTS THAT THE LOAF OF BREAD CONTAINED WITHIN THIS WRAPPER IS MADE FROM THE FOLLOWING PURE FOOD MATERIALS, AND NO OTHER INGREDIENTS OF ANY KIND WHEAT FLOUR, COMPRESSED YEAST, PURE FILTERED WATER, SUGAR AND SALT, PURE LARD, PASTEURIZED SKIM AND CONDENSED MILK.

Fight Immodest Dress for "Glory of Erin"

By Universal Service.

Dublin, Feb. 8.—War has been declared on the "glad neck" by Irish women and a league of St. Brigid has been established, with the warm approval of the authorities of the Catholic Church, to combat immodest fashions.

The convents and boarding schools are to be constituted area headquarters for the new league, and thousands of young women missionaries are annually to carry on the fight in their home districts.

All members of the new league will be required to sign the following pledge:

"For the glory of God and the honor of Erin I promise to avoid in my own person all impropriety in the matter of dress, and to maintain and hand down the traditional and proverbial purity and modesty of Irish womanhood."

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c.

LEGION TO VOICE ARMY POLICY

Call National Conference to Inform Congress of Military Program Favored by Veterans

What should be the future military policy of the United States? For the purpose of informing the country and of telling Congress what the veterans of the World War think about it, Commander Franklin D'Olier of the American Legion has summoned the members of the national executive, legislative and special military policy committees and the state commanders to a conference which opens at national headquarters, Indianapolis, today.

The conference will continue in session until the Legion's policy relative to the country's military policy has been clearly and definitely established, so that the meeting promises to compel attention from people in all walks of life and consideration, as an important event in history.

Realizing that the deliberations will be followed with the keenest interest, the American has secured from Thomas W. Miller, chairman of the national legislative committee, a special statement of the ideas of the Legion that are sponsored by that committee and the special committee on military policy, and which undoubtedly will serve as the tentative program of the conference. Mr. Miller's statement follows:

POINTS LEGION FAVORS.

The points in Senate bill 2488, which meet the ideas of the American Legion, follow:

There should be but one army of the United States. This force should include: Proper garrisons for our overseas possessions; a small but efficient home force available for initial military emergencies; a training establishment, including a sufficient number of trained officers and men to conduct the annual training; a citizens' army including the organized reserves subject to military service only in an emergency declared by Congress and the national guard of the United States composed of volunteers available for military service within the several states and as a reinforcement for the regular forces in military emergencies, not justifying the mobilization of the organized reserves.

The army of the United States will thus include a limited permanent or professional personnel and a numerous reserve or citizen personnel. It will provide for universal military training, but there will be no compulsory military service in time of peace.

NATIONAL GUARD'S STATUS.

The charter members of the organized reserves should be those officers and men of the World War, who volunteer to enroll for short periods subject to voluntary re-enrollment. This force will be permanently organized as far as practicable as a localized territorial army in brigades, divisions, army corps and field armies.

The National Guard of the United States should form an integral part of the citizen army. It will be organized in a general way, as now provided by law, under the National defense act, except that within the limits of strength authorized by law young men liable to military training may elect training in the National Guard instead of in the training camps normally provided, it being understood, however, that the training required in the National Guard shall be a real and substantial equivalent for the training required in the training camps.

The National Guard thus becomes a volunteer force within the citizen army, composed of officers and men who voluntarily assume an obligation to serve their respective States and the nation in military emergencies that do not justify the mobilization of the organized reserves.

WANT WAR UNDER SECRETARY.

An efficient general staff is essential to the success of any military establishment, but such a general staff can only be assured when its members are all trained for general-staff duty.

Reserve officers should have access to the schools provided for the training of general-staff officers as well as to the other service schools, and when in attendance at such schools receive the pay and allowance of their grades. The general staff should include at least 25 per cent of reserve officers.

It should also create the office of under Secretary of War, charged with the solution of the great industrial and business problems involved in the procurement of military supplies.

To be Concluded Tomorrow.

BOLD DEER TRAPPED IN NEWTON HENCOOP

A doe, pursued by a crowd of small boys and dogs, took refuge in a chicken coop belonging to John Jesse Thornton street, Newton, after running through the streets of the village for some time. The animal came from across the Charles River in Waltham, and was evidently making its way into the central of Newton when discovered by some youngsters. Frightened by their clamor, the deer ran in and out of several side streets and finally dropped of exhaustion in the Joyce yard.

ASKS AID FOR STARVING JEWS IN UKRAINIA

An urgent appeal from Meyer Grossman, former head of the Jewish secretariat of the Ukrainian government, who arrived here recently, to Jews of America in behalf of the starving people of Ukrainia, was made before an audience which filled the Scollay Square Theatre.

The suffering of the Jewish people, says Mr. Grossman, now surpasses that endured during the war. The entire population, he says, is faced with starvation.

MOTHERS, DO THIS—

When the Children Cough, Rub Musterole on Throats and Chests

No telling how soon the symptome may develop into croup, or worse. And then's when you're glad you have a jar of Musterole at hand to give prompt, sure relief. It does not blister.

As first aid and a certain remedy, Musterole is excellent. Thousands of mothers know it. You should keep a jar in the house, ready for instant use.

It is the ointment for adults, too. Relieves sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, chilblains, frosted feet, and colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia).

30c and 60c jars; hospital size $2.50.

MUSTEROLE
WILL NOT BLISTER

To Peel Off Blotchy, Rough or Chapped Skin

To remove roughness, chaps, freckles, blotches, or any complexion difficulty; the best thing to do is remove the skin itself. This is easily, painlessly and inexpensively done by the application of ordinary mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store in the original one-ounce package. The wax absorbs the defective outer skin, a little each day, gradually bringing the second layer of skin to the surface. The pores are unclogged and the face breathes in the life-giving oxygen. The new skin is beautifully soft and spotless, bearing the healthy glow of youth. Just apply the wax as you would cold cream, preferably at night, and in the morning wash it off. Full directions in each package. It's the most effective complexion treatment known.—Advertisement.

URGES LAW FOR LIGHT SAVING

Craig Declares Majority of Farmers Find it Beneficial

Denying the charge that daylight saving works an injury to the farmer by increasing his expenses, William N. Craig of Brookline, chairman of the vegetable committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and secretary of the Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston, declares that many members of the Massachusetts State grange are in favor of a state daylight-saving law.

Mr. Craig calls attention to the fact that the organization of which he is secretary, with a membership of 400, most of whom are engaged in farming, voted unanimously at a recent meeting to support the daylight saving movement.

He says the claim of the Department of Agriculture that daylight saving will injure agricultural interests in Massachusetts is incorrect, and that there is no foundation for the statement that it will increase the cost of agricultural products.

"I believe that there are some 38,000 farmers in our State."

He says he is not opposed to daylight saving, nor are all our large market gardeners, and it seems to me the height of absurdity to give out such wild statements as those emanating from the manager of the Worcester County Farm Bureau to the effect that it is an absolutely assured fact that if the clocks are set ahead next Summer the cost of foodstuffs will increase at least 50 per cent, and that it costs farmers anywhere from $50 to $100 a month extra to run their farms during the two sessions of daylight saving, etc."

Surgeon Besieged by Childless Women

Milford, Kan., Feb. 9.—It was the Sabbath in Milford, but not a day of rest in the hospital of Dr. J. R. Brinkley, whose fame through the goat gland operations for the restoration of youth has spread to every corner of the United States.

More than 1,000 letters from persons who see the stars of hope in the Brinkley discovery lie unanswered in the doctor's office. The doctor said that it appears that there is little or no hope for more than half the number who have addressed him.

This discouraging statement applies, he said, to several hundred women who have been deprived, through surgical operations, of the glands and interstitial tubes, and therefore a transplanting of goat glands cannot be successfully effected in numerous cases, however, there is hope.

"The most remarkable thing about these stacks of letters," said Doctor Brinkley, "is the proof offered by them that there are so many women in the world who are unable to bear children; likewise that these women, so sadly afflicted, are willing to make any sacrifice to become the mothers of children."

"I would give my life," one Chicago woman wrote, "if I could bring a baby into the world."

"There is another light there," said Dr. Brinkley, "in that the letters show how enormous is the number of women who have been deprived of their natural powers."

If this mass of letters is an indication of conditions, there are hundreds and thousands of childless husbands, who are not directly to blame for the lack of families.

Dr. Brinkley pointed out that the letters, with an occasional exception, are written by women of the refinement and high intellectual powers.

"This misery is not to be found among the so-called poorer classes," he said. "It is a condition more centered element of our population, and that is the element above all others that ought to be bringing children into the world. Their letters indicate that a large number of that element do want to have children and cannot.

"The situation only emphasizes the importance of interstitial operations with the goat glands. If but more of the surgeons of the country can be persuaded to make the same experiments that I have made, a world of good can be accomplished for this generation and the generations to come."

ARREST NEAR IN SHOOTING CASE

Police Know Assailant of Jerry Hershman, Roxbury Clerk

An arrest is expected shortly in the shooting of Jerry Hershman, clerk in a Washington street, Roxbury, pawnshop. Police inspectors believed they have identified his assailant.

On Saturday the man was much sought after, but he failed to visit any of the places he usually frequented. The inspectors believe they are able to locate him in connection with the police department and know where he secured an officer's badge.

He is not a member of the department nor was he one at any time. He has relatives, however, who are members.

BOTH PARTIES IN BIG MUDDLE

Political Situation Made More Obscure by Statements of Leading Men

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 9.—Instead of clarifying as a result of prominent persons coming out into the open with expressions of their political views and beliefs, the presidential political situation has become more obscure and muddled than ever as a result of the over the week activities, according to the privately expressed opinion today of party leaders on both sides.

The principal developments which have caused this are:

1—Herbert Hoover issued a statement declaring that he is not a candidate, but which did not state that he would not accept the nomination on either ticket.

2—Frank A. Hitchcock, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, reports that he finds the sentiment for Senator Johnson increasing in favor and a lessening of the enthusiasm for General Leonard Wood.

3—A split is threatened in the ranks of New York Republicans by William M. Calder's declaration that he will make a fight to go to the Chicago convention as a delegate-at-large, and that he will support Johnson's candidacy.

The Hoover statement was easily the most sensational development of the week. After reading the pronouncement the general question asked was: "Well, is Mr. Hoover a candidate? And if so, which side is he on?"

There was considerable speculation about Republican headquarters over the Washington report that there has developed a coolness between Mr. Hoover and the White House.

ARRANGES DEAN CONFERENCE

Gov. Bartlett Agrees to Meet Jaffery Selectmen on Thursday

East Jaffrey, N. H., Feb. 9.—Governor John H. Bartlett has arranged to give the selectmen of this town a hearing at 11 a. m. on Thursday, at Concord, in connection with the investigation of the murder of Rev. William Kendrick Dean, who was killed by German agents.

This conference will mark one of the most important phases of the Dean case, which has stirred New England for months. The Governor has ordered Attorney-General Oscar L. Young, of Laconia, and County Solicitor Roy M. Pickard, of Keene, to be present. They will be given a chance to defend the position which they have taken in the Dean case and their methods of procedure.

TO PRESENT BILL OF COMPLAINT.

At this hearing, Attorney Harry M. Guterman of Boston, counsel for the town of Jaffrey, will present a bill of complaint to the Governor and Council in support of the plea of the tax-payers of Jaffrey and surrounding towns that the Dean case be presented before another grand jury and that special counsel be appointed by the Governor to prosecute it in behalf of the State of New Hampshire.

At the last conference between the Governor and the selectmen, Governor Bartlett told the latter that if they had any charges against Attorney-General Young and County Solicitor Pickard, they should offer them in writing.

Attorney Guterman prepared a bill a very mild summing up of the criticisms which the selectmen and taxpayers have made against the County and State officials because of their alleged mishandling of the Dean case and failure to act on important evidence involving five suspects.

AGREES TO CONFERENCE.

The letter fixing the time of hearing was sent to the selectmen by W. E. Wallace, secretary to Governor Bartlett. The letter follows:

"Gentlemen:

"Governor Bartlett has arranged with Attorney-General Young to be in Concord next Thursday, February 14, on the conference you requested. The Attorney-General has also arranged with County Solicitor Pickard to be present at that time. Governor Bartlett will arrive in Concord around 11 o'clock in the forenoon and will be ready to go into conference with you as soon as he arrives, or as soon after as you can get to Concord.

"Yours very truly,

(Signed) "W. E. WALLACE."

The Department of Justice is very active at present on the Dean case. Important conferences have been held at Washington, Boston and Concord. The recent trip made by the Selectmen, Dean relatives and Attorney Guterman to Washington started the Federal machinery and early developments are looked for.

HAIL DE VALERA IN MILL CITIES

Acclaimed President by Tremendous Crowds in Tour of Bay State

Fall River and New Bedford acclaimed President Eamon De Valera and the Irish Republic today.

Instead of resting all morning in Boston, as he had planned to recuperate from his strenuous tour of the past few days, he was whisked away several hours ahead of schedule, to greet the throngs which gathered to cheer him at Fall River.

Fatigued by his whirlwind tour of Worcester, Springfield, Lowell and Lawrence, and the making of over a dozen speeches—he made seven in Worcester alone—as well as the strain of shaking hands with thousands, continually travelling, with irregular meals and little sleep, De Valera had looked forward to twelve hours' stay in Boston.

STORM UPSETS SCHEDULE.

The irregularity of the railroad schedules spoiled his plans, however, and an hour's delay in reaching Boston from Worcester, resulted in his being three hours late in reaching Lowell, and four hours late in reaching Lawrence, and so upset his entire schedule.

In Lowell and in Lawrence thousands waited patiently, for hours while De Valera struggled with disorganized railways and snowbound roads to reach them. But the delays could not damper the enthusiasm with which they greeted him when he did arrive. Mayor Thomas greeted him in Lowell and Mayor White in Lawrence.

"Ireland has delegated me to come to this country to secure recognition of Ireland's independence because Ireland knows that recognition by the United States means recognition by the world," he said to the thousands gathered in Associates Hall, Lowell, and in City Hall and the Armory, Lawrence.

EXPECTS RECOGNITION.

"The people of the United States, by their great attendance wherever I have spoken, and by their enthusiasm, have recognized Ireland, as have over a hundred municipalities where I have been officially received as the President of the Irish Republic. I feel confident that this sentiment, so heartily endorsed by the people of the United States, is spreading, and that the larger part of every body politic will recognize our independence."

Mayor William P. White, Attorney Thomas H. Mahony of Boston, William H. O'Brien of the Public Service Commission, John R. Haverty and M. A. Sullivan were among the speakers who preceded President De Valera in Lawrence. T. F. Donohue presided. A set of resolutions adopted by the Lawrence Central Labor Union, recognizing De Valera and the Irish Republic, and urging Congress to do the same, were presented to him.

EXPLAINS PURPOSE OF BONDS.

Attorney Mahony answered logically and in detail the arguments put forth by the opponents of the republic, showing how there are four different ways open to Britain to establish the republic.

Dr. Mortara, Ambassador of the Dail Eireann to America, explained the purposes of the Irish bond drive which, he said, will be devoted to industrial and commercial improvements in Ireland and not to the spending of propaganda.

"Fifty millions have already been raised in Ireland," said Dr. McCartan, "and there is every indication that the allotted ten millions will be raised here."

HOLDUP MAN ROBS TWO IN WEST END

Portsmouth, N. H., Feb. 9. — Fifty men, comprising riggers, painters, machinists and laborers, were ordered to quit work temporarily in the Navy Yard here today. It was the first layoff for some time and its cause is believed to be the failure of Congress to pass the naval appropriation bill.

SOUTHBORO MAN SEEKS $1,000 FOR AUTO DAMAGE

W. K. Pinkham of Southboro has been sued for $1,000 by William J. Terry of Hopkinton. Terry alleges that on October 13, 1919, at Hopkinton, his car was damaged when the defendant's machine collided with it.

McCORMACK IN PLEASING FORM

Capacity Crowd at Symphony Hears Tenor in Well-Balanced Program

John McCormack is the sweetest singer and the most gracious gentleman on the present-day concert platform, judging from the enthusiastic welcome a Boston audience gave him at Symphony Hall yesterday.

It is getting to be almost a platitude to say he sang to a capacity audience. When McCormack sings there is no limit but the walls and ceiling to Symphony Hall capacity.

He brought with him Edwin Schneider, his accompanist, and Lauri Kennedy, a 'cellist whose finished artistry was warmly received.

McCormack's program was well balanced. It seemed a trifle too much so for his audience, which could not seem to get its usual thrills until the latter part of the program with its encores.

It began with an aria, "A te fra tanti affanni" (from Davidde Penitente) by Mozart; and went on with a group, "May Night," by J. Brahms; "Love's Secret," by Granville Bantock; "Oh Cease Thy Singing," by S. Rachmaninoff, and "Before the Dawn," by George W. Chadwick.

Following the intermission McCormack rendered a group of Irish folk songs comprising "The Falling Star," arranged by Stanford; "The Soliloquy," arranged by Somervell; "The Irish Love Song," arranged by Stanford, and "The Foggy Dew," arranged by Milligan-Fox.

The program, with the usual encores, concluded with "Bonnie Wee Thing," by Liza Lehmann; "Sweet Peggy O'Neil," by Cuin Waldron; "Your Eyes," by Edwin Schneider, and "Eleanore," by Coleridge-Taylor.

Clubwomen Oppose War on Cigarettes

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 9.—The Methodist Episcopal Church will get little if any support from New York clubwomen in its war on cigarette smoking by women, according to declarations by members of the State Federation of Women's Clubs now in convention here.

"We are supposed to have free speech, liberty and pursuit of happiness, and why does everybody want to take them away from us?" demanded Mrs. John Frances Yarger. Former President Mrs. Eugene Grant, another ex-president, also protested, saying that women had a right to smoke. "After prohibition what next" she exclaimed.

NOSKE TO IGNORE ALLIES' DEMAND

War Minister Says He Will Refuse to Arrest His Officers

By International News Service

Berlin, Feb. 9.—The "covering letter" from Paris explaining the allies' demand for more than 800 German military and state officers for trial, which has just been received here, points out that not all of the Germans were included who are held by the allies to be guilty of war crime, but only those bearing the greatest responsibility, it was learned from official sources today.

The allies made it plain that they do not intend to give amnesty to officers, but reserve the right to prosecute all who are guilty.

German government officials declare that the note is not an ultimatum, but opens the way to further negotiations. It was handed to Chancellor Bauer by M. Marcilly, the French envoy, on Saturday night.

Messages have reached the government from all parts of Germany, demanding a rejection of the allies' demand. They come from heads of chambers of commerce and universities, from the presidents of the East Prussian and Bavarian assemblies and from officers of the Old Baltic fleet. The Premiers of the German States are scheduled to convene here tomorrow to take up the situation.

"I will not attempt to arrest the officers who are serving under me because I know that such an aggravating order of arrest would never be obeyed," said War Minister Noske. "Nor will I forbid demonstrations protesting against the surrender of the officers."

There were unconfirmed rumors in official circles that France might withdraw her diplomatic envoy, breaking off relations with Germany, in the event of refusal to give up the wanted officials.

A dispatch from Warsaw quotes a Bolshevik official as saying that the entente's pressure is to force Germany to join against Russia. This was said to be the opinion of Nicholai Lenine and other Soviet officials at Moscow.

At 86 Shovels Snow Seven Hours a Day

Lenox, Feb. 9.—Henry Snyder, eighty-six years old, one of the oldest residents of Great Barrington, holds the belt in this section as a champion snow shoveler. For the past two days he has shoveled seven hours a day and during that time figures that he handled thirty tons of snow at least. He has never used liquor or tobacco and is inclined to attribute his remarkable vitality to that fact.

On his last birthday he entertained some of the village youths by standing on his head and turning a handspring, at both of which tricks he is unusually adept.

WOOD WILL STAY IN THE ARMY

General's Managers Decide Resignation Need Not Be Offered Now

Washington, Feb. 9.—The resignation of Major-General Leonard Wood from the army has been indefinitely postponed. Following the Chicago conference of his managers, it was decided that there was no immediate need for him to quit the army to carry on his campaign for the presidential nomination.

At Wood headquarters here it is admitted that the friends and backers of the general are at variance, one camp holding that his boom cannot make proper headway while he remains an army commander, the other maintaining that his position offers certain advantages. Should the Democratic administration take him to task for his utterances they believe the reprimand would act as a boomerang, hurting the Democrats more than it would the general.

It is understood that General Wood himself has been as much in the air as to what he should do as anyone, and that he is personally inclined towards leaving the army. He is said to be absolutely opposed to taking advantage of his official position to promote his candidacy.

GOLFERS WOULD DO WELL TO PATTERN AFTER TENNIS ASSOCIATION

ENERGY TO SEND GOLF TEAMS ABROAD IS NEEDED

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Golfers noted with interest that the United States Lawn Tennis Association voted at its annual meeting to challenge for the Davis Cup and to send a team to the Olympic games. In order to play for the Davis Cup the Tennis Association will send its representatives to Australia, where the famous international court trophy now is.

Up to the present the United States Golf Association has taken no action to stimulate international golf competition to a like degree. The tennis players have been sent long distances for many years, in order to represent the United States, and it appears reasonable that the Golf Association should do something of the same sort.

America can never present a real front in international golf until properly selected teams, with expenses paid, are sent to those places where the world-wide reputation is to be picked up. This year, Deal, England, and Gullane, Scotland, would be proper localities for the United States Golf Association plant some of its representatives.

The British open championship will be played at Deal and the amateur at Gullane, where the Muirfield course is situated.

Belmont Springs Club to Elect Members

Belmont Springs Country Club members continue their program of advancing their club. It is not so long since Belmont erected one of the finest club houses in Massachusetts, and now the members have voted to expend $20,000 in improving the course. Belmont will elect some new members before the Spring season, and those who get inside will be lucky.

Bay State Golfers to Play in South

John J. Linehan of the Worcester Country Club has added his name to the list of Massachusetts golfers who will play in the South this Winter. He better watch out, for his friend Fred Elliott of Woodland is going down to the warm belt this week looking for scalps. Elliott has been getting in a lot of putting practice at the Boston Golf Shop and after sinking long puts into the small holes on the indoor green, expects the regulation cups to look like baskets.

Mrs. Francis Ouimet Studying Golf

Mrs. Francis Ouimet is taking indoor golf lessons from Harry Bowler and by next Fall, when the mixed-foursomes roll around, should be ready to give Fred Hasbrouck assistance so pairs will have to improve over past form in order to win the turkeys and other prizes which are given at these meetings.

Many Canadian Golfers Busy in South

Canadian golfers are numerous in the South. They report that George S. Lyon, the veteran Canadian player, who has won the amateur championship of Canda many times, is recovering the use of his left arm, which was injured in an automobile accident, and expects to be as good as ever in this year's events. The Canadians are anxious to make a better showing in the international matches than last year and hope to place a strong team against the United States in 1921.

Golf Season to Open at Lexington

It is about the season when the Massachusetts Golf Association announces the dates for the annual State open tournaments. The list this year is bound to be attractive and will have about thirty events. The program will undoubtedly open April 19, at Lexington. No other club could expect Patriots' Day date.

Mike Brady to Show His Wares in Florida

Ouimet Favors Title Foursome for Men

Francis Ouimet would like to have the U. S. G. A. institute a men's amateur foursome championship, with pairs to qualify by sections. He points out that foursome play is the most popular form of golf, and deserves representation in the list of national championship events.

Teams are being selected at Bellair for an East vs. West match.

Women Golfers to Get Busy at Pinehurst

Women golfers will have possession of the championship course at Pinehurst this week when the fifteenth annual St. Valentine's tournament for women will be held, starting tomorrow. The players will qualify in eights.

Bay State Leaders in Pinehurst Golf

Of the sixteen Massachusetts golfers rated at four strokes or better at least eight will participate in the annual North and South amateur championship at Pinehurst. This will be a larger percentage than is likely to appear at any tournament in 1920, save the State amateur championship, when the low handicap men turn out 100 per cent.

Pittsburgh Golf Has Stars in South

Davis Robertson, professional at the Pittsburgh Country Club and assistant to Alex Smith at Belleair, Fla., up to the present writing, appears to be the find of the Winter season. Robertson has been going over the championship course at Belleair in the Spring months and recently tied MacDonald Smith's record of 68. He is being groomed to win the West Coast open championship, one of the big events of the Southern season.

Hope Miss Leitch Will Come to U. S.

Now that it is practically certain that Miss Stirling, the United States woman's champion, will not play in the British championship this year, perhaps Miss Leitch, the British champion, can be induced to play in America. It will be a shame if 1920 passes without Miss Stirling meeting Miss Leitch. Few matches between men would create as much interest as a match between the two women champions. The British cannot believe that Miss Stirling is quite up to Miss Leitch, and we will have to have a practical demonstration before we concede that Miss Leitch is up to Miss Stirling.

Seek Golf Professional of National Reputation

Here is an opportunity for a professional of "national reputation." The Brooklands Golf and Country Club of Detroit is after a professional, but the officers declare he must have a "national reputation." Thomas W. Payne, president of the club, says that Brookland will pay a larger salary than any club in America for the right man. The club recently voted to expend $50,000 in improvements.

Sacco to Box Kilbane if He Defeats Britt

Jimmy (Young) Sacco, East Boston lightweight, will go to Philadelphia to fight Johnny Kilbane if he is successful in his twelve-round bout with Frankie (Young) Britt, which will be staged by the Eureka A. A. at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night. The featherweight champion has been avoiding a meeting with Sacco on account of a difference over the question of weight. It is believed, however, that the boxers will come to an understanding on this issue soon. To get the match with Kilbane, Sacco must first dispose of Britt. All of which is quite an assignment, as the new England lightweight champion is going on high just now.

Revere Hotels.

FOUR more Revere hotels were launched Wednesday, making fifteen that are proceeding to sea under their own power. The Oriental Hotel slid off the ways at noon, enjoying a two-hour handicap on the Pasadena, which started from scratch.

AS this is the first hotel race across the Atlantic, the handicappers are somewhat puzzled. About six dozen schooner type bungalows entered the transatlantic regatta, but even aground off Ireland, A bungalow ain't much good aground.

THE first symptoms of a European movement in American real estate was flagged by Gimp Ballard, who owns a bungalow of the three-ply type with reinforced metal corners. When the storm was buzzing plenty, Gimp noticed the roof was leaking, which was natural. Then he piped six feet of ocean in the cellar, which was nothing unusual. But when he started to get seasick, Gimp figured it was time to blame one more thing on the Democratic Administration. He took a squint out the window and piped an absolutely strange purpose playing leapfrog where the lawn used to be before the next door roosters scratched it up looking for worms that weren't there.

Gimp knew that he would sure stir up some diplomatic shindig, starting for Europe without his passport papers. Gimp anchored outside the three-mile limit and hung a corkscrew at half-mast, signifying in the language of flowers that crew of bungalow were dying of six per cent. thirst. He would like to get hold of the city slicker who sold him a lighining rod instead of a set of oars. He is also looking for the architect who put a back gate on the house instead of a rudder.

FRIDAY morning eight Beachmont boarding houses slipped their cables and picked up pilots off Castle Island. A strike is expected by the Sailors' Union, as none of the landladies have mariner's licenses. Auctioneer Joe Day started after 'em in a limousine rowboat. Joe expects to sell 'em the riparian rights of the Gulf Stream.

SOON as he inhaled the news that the hotels were racing across his ocean, Tommy Lipton shaved, shined, massaged and manicured the Shamrock IV. and lit out after 'em like a weasel after a string of sausages. Sir Thomas figures that a seashore hotel is one craft that he can beat.

IF the Shamrock reaches Europe first, Tommy will demand one of the handles on the America cup. The New York Yacht Committee on Deep Sea Bungalow Racing may decide that Lippy is entitled only to the shot polish they shine the cup with.

THE only news received of the hotel race so far was picked up by the Ouija Board Cable Company and was signed by the captain of Thorpe's Hotel. It states his hotel is out of the race with a busted hinge on the pantry door. He will put into Havana for repairs and nourishment, because he stinks he wants the world to know that he decided with his face toward the foes of prohibition.

HE also wee[j]ese that his bouncer ejected two [illegible]dies who were loafing in the lobby.

THE news of the race will be followed with fat interest. It looks like Lippy's last chance to beat anything across the old gutter.

MUST SUIT GAME TO PHYSIQUE

Golfers Make Big Mistake in Trying Styles of Others, Says Hagen

By WALTER C. HAGEN, Open Golf Champion.

The world's golf instructors, in taking charge of his pupil, has many things to consider outside of merely teaching him to hit the ball. The proper grip, the correct stance, the ideal swing and the right clubs to use and other little details cannot be shown at a man in any old fashion. That is, many things that suit John Jones would fail utterly in supplying the demands and the needs of Bill Smith.

When golf was young in this country a lesson was a lesson, and when one person obtained instruction from a pro he and his friends thought that it could be passed around from Jones to Smith and from Smith to Brown. Can you imagine a golfer today getting his instruction second and third handed?

Golfers Must Play in Own Way

Two brothers played golf together in the early days of the game in America. They were ambitious and wanted to learn to play golf well. So it was decided between them to take a few lessons. One of the brothers was to take the lessons and impart the knowledge of the game that he had gained in his way to his brother. It so happened that these two were totally different and about as unlike as any two brothers can possibly be. The result can be imagined.

Golf is a game that knows no age, no size, or no shape. A man with one hand, with one leg or one eye can develop a game but usually he must do it his way. There is no particular build for golf. If you believe that the tall, lanky player can outdrive the short thin man, what would you say if some one were to tell you that often times this is the reverse. A broad, fat man you might think had an edge on the little thin fellow, but this is not the case in nine out of ten times.

Little Man Often Better Driver

A powerfully built man could give the ball the necessary wallop if he were to put all of his strength and his body into the shot at the moment of impact, but putting the body into the shot at the correct moment is a difficult thing, and a little man sometimes performs that function better than a big one. Large men are too often likely to let their arms do the work instead of getting the body in the shot and when they do attempt to take advantage of their extra weight, somehow things go wrong.

Many a time when a young chap of exceptional build steps up to the tee the remark is often made that he should knock it a mile more or less, and when he hits a puny effort down the fairway, likely as not into a sand trap, there is an exclamation of surprise. This is because he has used his strength unwisely and put the body into the shot too soon. The proper timing of the shot sends the ball away from the tee with plenty of force behind it.

Hard Hitting Not Always Desired

Hard hitting is not always to be desired, but one must have something in reserve for an emergency. There is always a time when it is necessary to get a little more than ordinary into the shot to make up for some slip or raise chance on wining a hole in a "birdie" when it must be done to save a match or gain an advantage for a medal round. Every pro knows this and every pro, that is those accustomed to playing in tournaments, can always give the ball a little extra when necessary.

TILLO TO MAKE 140 POUNDS FOR CALZONE

Tony Palcoulo announced today that he would let Frank Tillo enter the ring at 140 pounds for a match with A Calzone. Several up-State clubs are already angling for this match. Tillo, it is understood, is prepared to make 140 pounds. Henry Meyers will probably come to bat in a day or so with something in regard to the weight at which Tillo will agree to battle Calzone.

RED SOX TRADES FORECASTED

Sam Jones, Stuffy McInnis and Everett Scott Mentioned as Likely to Go

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Rumors of a trade are flying thick, as the baseball magnates are gathered for the schedule meeting of the leagues, and the Boston Red Sox are generally mentioned in every talk of deals or sales. Everett Scott, shortstop; Stuffy McInnis, first base, and Sam Jones, pitcher, are the three players whose names are being bandied about most, and the baseball sharpers believe that these three members of the former world's champions are due to play in pastures new.

A three-cornered trade is forecast, which will involve the Red Sox, the Tigers and the Cleveland Indians. If this deal goes through, according to advance notices, Jones will go to Cleveland from Boston in exchange for First Baseman Harris, and McInnis will be passed over to the Tigers for Harry Heilman, who would consequently be planted in the Red Sox outfield, shattered by the sale of Ruth.

It is known that the Red Sox have made offers to Charlie Comiskey for Happy Felsch, and those who pretend to be "in" announce that the Chicago outfielder may be swapped for Scott, Boston's great shortstop.

RUTH ARRIVES; IN TIP TOP SHAPE

Has Not Yet Signed Contract to Play With Yankees—Seeks Slice of Purchase Money

Battering Babe Ruth, New York's latest most celebrated cutter, has arrived in Boston, after spending the early part of the Winter out on the Coast keeping in shape. Rumor had it that Ruth was heavy, and so on, but he returns looking as well as ever he did. He's lighter now than he was at the close of the 1919 playing season, and is brown as a berry—of the brown variety—and hard as a rock.

Though his future baseball efforts will be made for New York, he intends to make Boston his permanent address, and is ready to enlarge his farm up Bedford way. The big Babe has been playing golf steadily, as well as exhibition baseball, and will now rest up until the Spring training season.

He has signed an agreement to play with New York at a record salary, but hasn't affixed his name to a contract yet. He is waiting to interview the owner of the Red Sox about getting a slice of his purchase price before attending to other business.

AMATEURS TO EXHIBIT WARES AT C. A. C. TONIGHT

The amateur glove wielders will receive an opportunity to display their wares at a show to be conducted by the St. Joseph's T. A. S. at the Commercial Club tonight. There will be tussles at 108, 115 and 125 pounds. Secretary Manning announces that a large number of entries have been received. The St. Joseph's Club has put on some stellar shows during the past few months and tonight's card will probably excelling the rest. Johnny Lynch and Young Forney, both of East Boston, will meet in a special bout.

Pratt for the Braves

Second Baseman Derrill Pratt of the Yankees will wear the uniform of the Boston Braves this season. He was in exchange for "Red" Shanks, on whom the New York Americans refused to grant waivers last week.

MUGGSY IN FINE TRIM FOR BOUT

Kayo King Has Been Training Hard for Bout With McMenimen Tonight

By JACK CONWAY.

K. O. Muggsy will resume operations in the ring when he clashes with Johnny McMenimen of Cambridge in a twelve-round bout at the Pastway A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building tonight. The East Boston kayo king says he will live up to the reputation he has made by his hectic battling in this section.

Muggsy has trained for tonight's whirl. This is something new for Clarence Finn's warrior, as he has taken on most of his opponents without doing any preliminary work. His big wallop has usually been enough to win the honors.

The humping Muggsy recently received at the hands of McMenimen made him realize he would have to train if he were to keep toppling over his opponents. So the kayo star began to condition himself. He now reports he is in better shape than he has been in at any time in his career and that he will stop McMenimen.

This will be quite a task. Muggsy and McMenimen have already met twice. On the first occasion Muggsy won the the decision, despite the fact he was knocked down once. In the second encounter McMenimen grabbed the award. He also sent his opponent to the canvas twice.

The winner will be in line for a match with Young Kioby, which is a prize which should spur on both boxers to give their best efforts.

BOSTON SEVEN PLAYS IN PITTSBURGH FRIDAY

Boston hockey interest centres this week in the Duquesne Rink, Pittsburgh, where on Friday and Saturday nights the Boston All Stars will engage the Strong Pittsburgh A. A. team in the first two of a series of six games, the winner of which will represent the United States in the Olympic hockey championship series at Antwerp, Belgium, in April.

The Royal Road to Learning

THIS phrase is said to date back to the time when Euclid opened a school of mathematics in Alexandria. He was asked by King Ptolemy whether he could not explain his art to him in a simpler manner. "Sire," said the geometrician, "there is no royal road to learning."

April Folly

By Cynthia Stockley

A Brilliant New Film Romance With Marion Davies

Watch for This Story in Motion Pictures

"April Folly," soon to be seen in leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production, released through Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft picture, under direction of Robert Z. Leonard. Scenario by Adrian Johns on.

"YOU think, then, it is my name a made haste to escape before the that should be left with the smirch on it" she asked dispassionately.

Diana grew crimson and then very pale.

"The scandal"—she stammered.

"My people—you ought to know what it would mean to have such a story attached to me."

"It would be better to have it attached to me, of course," April agreed, with an irony that was entirely wasted on Diana.

"You see that, don't you?" she said eagerly. "After all, nobody knows your name, and it will soon be forgotten. But mine——"

April could only smile. She saw that pity was entirely wasted here. Diana was eminently able to look after herself when it came to the matter of self-preservation.

Only a Few Days

"And it will only be for another couple of days. After that we shall never see Mrs. Stanislaw or any of this rotten crew of women again."

"You are an optimist," was April's only comment.

"After all, it is I who will have to bear the brunt of their insolence tomorrow, whatever name I go under," complained Diana.

"I'm afraid I cannot give you my face as well as my name to help you to bear it," said April dryly. Unexpectedly the retort pierced, for Diana suddenly burst into tears.

"I know you think me a beast. But I really am thinking more of my father than of myself. He is terribly proud. It would break his heart to hear this story of my being found in a man's cabin. Oh, how I could have done such an awful thing! You think I don't care, but I tell you I could simply die of shame."

April was softened.

"Don't cry, Diana, and don't worry any further. Of course, your name shall never come out. That is quite settled. Come now, and let me help you into bed. You had far better stay here than face that tigress Stanislaw in her den."

Nevertheless, when she had safely tucked the still weeping and exhausted Diana into her berth, she thought it advisable to make an excursion herself to the den of the tigress, ostensibly to fetch Diana's night-things, in reality to let her know where Diana was spending the night, and that the girl had one woman friend at least to stand by her. Then as she expected, Mrs. Stanislaw was awake and lying in wait, ready to spring. It must have been a disagreeable surprise to see April instead of the fair victim. The formers manner was all suavity.

Worse Things Ahead

"I am sorry to disturb you, but I have come for Miss Poole's things. She is not at all well, and I have persuaded her to spend the night with me." Tranquilly she began to collect night-wear, slippers, hair and tooth-brushes. The tigress, having thoroughly taken aback, could do nothing for the moment but breathe heavily and glare. April, with the wisdom of the serpent, made haste to escape before the feline creature had regained the use of claw and fang.

But there were worse things to face in the morning. Even though Diana postponed the evil hour by pretending she was ill and having her breakfast in bed, she could not stay in the cabin forever. Once the first days of seasickness are over there is a rule against people stopping in their berths all day except under doctor's orders, and the stewardesses are very rigid in enforcing this. Besides, the captain and first officer inspect cabins between 10 and 11 a. m., and Diana had no particular yearning to see them again just then.

April went down to breakfast as usual, outwardly composed, but with an eye secretly alert to spy out the land. It did not take her long to discover that all the women were in arms, with their stabbing knives ready for action. Mrs. Stanislaw had evidently not been idle, and the name of "Lady Diana" was already bracketed with that of the "April fool." To send her entirely to Coventry was rather too drastic treatment for an earl's daughter, but many a cold glance came her way.

"Birds of a feather nest together," was one of the tart observations that fell upon her ears as she passed a group of women who only yesterday were fawning upon her. Plainly it was considered a fresh outrage upon womanhood that she should have given the protection of her name and cabin to the heroine of last night's scandal.

She did not mind very much. With a clear conscience on this count at least, she was able to meet their displeasure imperturbably. But she could not help feeling sorry for the real Diana.

The unfortunate creature, on venturing forth to her own cabin, was met by the sight of Mrs. Stanislaw dragging all her possessions into the corridor. It appeared that, now that for two remaining days at sea, the tigress could not lie down with the black sheep.

There Was a Reason

A sweet and sympathetic soul, who also lived down the same alley and had the same horror of contaminating influences, had therefore offered to take her in. The picturesque incident was being witnessed and silently approved by women in the neighboring cabins.

It must be remembered that most of these people had been persistently fêted, even lionized, by Diana during the voyage. Some of them, matrons with daughters of their own, were really shocked by the "bad example" her behavior had established. So it was perhaps not to be wondered at that a sort of combined sniff of holiness and self-righteousness went up to heaven when the culprit came charging down the passage, nose in air and a defiant flush upon her cheek.

Stumbling over the trunks and piles of clothing which littered the place, she managed to gain her room and close the door behind her with a resounding bang, to show how little she cared about any of them. But it was immediately reopened by Mrs. Stanislaw, come to fetch more of her things, and not averse to taking as long as possible over the business.

By continually going backward and forward for small armfuls of articles, and always leaving the door open, she thought to deprive Diana of all privacy. The latter bore with it for as long as her patience lasted, which was about five minutes.

Sought Refuge

Then she flung out of the room, hoping to find refuge elsewhere. But wherever she went it was the same. In the writing-room every one bent suddenly over their blotting pads, and the balmy morning air took on an Arctic chill. Music and conversation faded away when she sauntered into the music salon.

On deck even the sailors looked at her curiously. The story of her indiscretion had penetrated to every corner of the vessel. The miserable girl fetched a book from the library and tried to hide herself behind it, seated in her deck chair. She soon had that side of the ship to herself.

Later it was discovered that a lady with whom she was engaged to play off a fiancé in deck quoits had "scratched." The same thing happened with regard to the bridge drive. The girl who was cast as her opponent in the opening round publicly withdrew her name from the competition.

There it was, up on the games' notice board, a girl's name with a big, black pencil mark drawn through it. All who ran might read, and a good many did run to read.

Clearly the April fool had become the object of the most unanimous taboo ever set in motion on a ship. Her name was mud. Even the men did not rally to her aid, though she had been popular enough with them before. There are few men who will not crumble up before a phalanx of women with daggers in their hands and feathers in their hair—even as the big-game hunter thinks it no shame to flee before a horde of singing ants.

The Girl With the Curl

The Two Voices

CHAPTER XXIV.

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

DANIEL ROONEY was a business man not given to long telephone conversations.

He related to Ruth Courtney the results of the physicians' consultation in short, terse sentences. The girl found too hard to appreciate that this was the man with whom she had talked in his own home this morning.

"I have told you all this," he said finally, "that you may explain conditions to your sister. All depends upon her, so far as Hugh's peace of mind and consequent health of body and nerves are concerned. Let me know in the morning when he may expect Doris. Goodby."

Mrs. Courtney and Doris had gone into the living room to wait for Ruth, and here the girl followed them.

When she entered she saw that her sister had been crying. Her cheeks were flushed and her eyes slightly reddened.

Ignoring these evidences of emotion, Ruth drove straight to the point and, in language almost as businesslike as Mr. Rodney's own, reported the invalid's condition.

"It is just as they feared," she said when she had stated the facts. "Hugh is absolutely blind. The optic nerve may be—probably is—permanently injured. The only chance of his ever seeing again—and there is but one chance in many hundreds—would be destroyed were he to have any great anxiety or emotional strain. Moreover any such strain would interfere dangerously with his restoration to health.

Kept Quiet

"Therefore both physicians command that he is kept quiet and as happy as it is possible for a blind man to be."

"Yes, Ruth—this poor child has been telling me of the awful ordeal she underwent this morning. I greatly fear the effect upon her of such experiences should they be repeated. I hope Hugh's father will understand that she is not overrobust and will not insist that she see the invalid very often just now. As he gets stronger, and more normal, she may go to him frequently. But now once a week should be often enough."

Ruth tried to answer with the respect due her parent.

"Mother, I think you hardly understand the situation. Plainly, it is this: Hugh loves Doris. He feels that she is all he has to live for."

"Naturally he does. Yet he has his father and his sister."

"Yes—but when a man is in love his family do not count," Ruth rejoined without any idea of sarcasm. "And Hugh is the style of man who cares very deeply. It was the thought of Doris that made it possible for him to bear the long journey home. It is the thought of her that keeps him from despair at the prospect of his blindness. He lives on the hope of seeing her every day."

Mrs. Courtney was silent for a moment. She was thinking fast.

Might Be Blind

If Hugh was going to be blind, and an invalid, she did not want her daughter to marry him. On the other hand, if he were to be again as he once was, he was just the man to make an excellent husband. His family moved in the best society, he was an only son; he would some day succeed to his father's prosperous business. Yet—at present——

She looked at Doris. The girl tried to smile.

"Don't worry, dear mother," with an effort to appear brave. "The experience of this morning jarred me, I confess. But I do not want to talk about it now, for it would only make me cry again, like a silly little goose. And, you see, I will not have to decide anything before tomorrow morning—will I?"

"No, indeed, my darling, you will not," her mother assured her.

"You will have to let Mr. Rodney know then at what hour you will go to see Hugh." Ruth interposed tersely. "That was the last thing he impressed upon me before he rang off just now."

"We're you to tell him, or was Doris herself to telephone to him?" Mrs. Courtney questioned. This affair seems to have been taken out of her hands."

Ruth paused on her way to the door. "What difference does it make?" she asked wearily. "Mr. Rodney suggested that I let him know at what hour Hugh might expect Doris tomorrow. But that was only because he happened to be talking to me at the moment. If I might make a suggestion it would be that Doris herself call him up in the morning—if she wants to do so—and make her own arrangements.

"But I don't want to!" Doris objected.

"The main thing is that you are to go over to see Hugh," Ruth said. "As to who shall telephone and who shall not, it is all too trivial to dispute about."

Then she went up to her own room. When she was out of hearing the mother spoke.

"Doris, darling, suppose you wait until after dinner before deciding at all. Ruth is sometimes so sharp that she gives me a hurried, worried feeling, and probably she has the same effect upon you. Wait before promising anything."

"But," Doris ventured, "Ralph is coming this evening."

"Well," the mother said, "postpone your decision until he has gone. I am glad he is coming. You need such cheer as he always brings to you."

Carried a Tube of Tooth Paste 3 Years

Many a person has stopped brushing the teeth because of tooth pastes that harden. It is especially true of children.

The experiments of Prof. James B. Stebbins, Jr., of New York, long ago proved that Albodon Dental Cream will not harden or dry out in any weather. Three years ago Mr. Otto Kupfer of 806 Hudson Street, Hoboken, N. J., took two dozen tubes of Albodon to South America. On his return war had broken out and he enlisted in our army and went to France. He was recently discharged, and in unpacking found a partly used tube of Albodon, three years old, still in perfect condition.

Albodon is calcium carbonate, saponified and mixed with the well-known antiseptic oils of cloves, cinnamon and eucalyptus. It is perfectly made and effective and so safe that children can use it. It sells under a guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded.—Advertisement.

The Cinema Murder

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

"VERY," Philip continued. "You see, you've imbibed a false view of life. You've placed yourself amongst the gods and your feet really are made of very sticky clay. * * * Shall I find my own way out?"

"You can find your way to hell!" Power roared. "Use your toy pistol, if you want to. You're going where you'll never need it again!"

He took a giant stride, a stride which was more like the spring of a maddened bull, towards Philip. The veneer of a spurious civilization seemed to have fallen from him. He was the great and splendid animal, transformed with an overmastering passion. There was murder in his eyes. His great right arm, with its long, hairy fingers and its single massive ring, was like a limb of some prehistoric creature. Philip's brain and his feet, however, were alike nimble. He sprang a little on one side, and though that first blow caught him just on the edge of the shoulder and sent him spinning round and round, he saved himself by clutching at the desk.

Fortunately, it was his left arm that hung helpless by his side. His fingers groped feverishly in the cavernous folds of his overcoat pocket. Power, who had dashed against the wall, smashing the glass of one of the pictures, had already recovered his balance and turned around. The little revolver, with which one Philip was barely acquainted, flashed suddenly out in the lamplight. Even in that lurid moment he kept his nerve.

Pulled the Trigger

He aimed at the right arm outstretched to strike him, and pulled the trigger. Through the little mist of smoke he saw a spasm of pain in his assailant's face, felt the thundering crash of his other arm, striking him on the side of the head. The room spun round. There was a second flash of light—and oblivion. * * * When he came to he was lying with his finger pressed against the electric bell. Power was clutching the desk for support, and gasping. The sober person in black, with a couple of footmen behind him, was in the room. * * * Their master turned to them.

"There has been an accident here," he groaned, "nothing serious. Take that gentleman and put him in the car. It's waiting outside for him. Telephone round for Dr. Renshaw."

For a single moment the majordomo hesitated. The weapon was still smoking in Philip's hand. Then Power's voice rang out again in furious command.

"Do as I tell you," he ordered. "If there's one of you here opens his lips about this, he loses my service tomorrow. And a dollar of pension, mind," he added, his voice sinking a little.

The servant bowed sombrely. "Your orders shall be obeyed, sir," he promised.

He took up the telephone, and sighed to one of the footmen, who helped Phillip to the door. A moment afterwards the latter sank back amongst the cushions, a little dizzy and breathless, but restyled almost instantly by the cool night air. He gave the chauffeur his address, and the car glided through the iron gates and down Fifth avenue.

CHAPTER XI.

PHILIP was awakened the next morning by the insistent ringing of the telephone at his elbow. He took up the receiver, conscious of a sharp pain in his left shoulder as he moved.

"Is this Mr. Merion Ware?" a man's smooth voice inquired.

"Yes!"

"I am speaking for Mr. Sylvanus Power. Mr. Sylvanus Power regrets very much that he is unable to lunch with Mr. Ware as arranged today, but he is compelled to go to Philadelphia on the morning train. He will be glad to meet Mr. Ware anywhere, a week today, and know the result of the matter which was discussed last night."

"To whom am I speaking?" Philip demanded. "I don't know anything about lunching with Mr. Power today."

"I am Mr. Power's secretary, George Lunt," was the reply. "Mr. Power's message is very clear. He wishes you to know that he will not be in New York until a week today."

"How is Mr. Power?" Philip inquired.

"He met with a slight accident last night," the voice continued, "and is obliged to wear his arm in a sling. Except for that he is quite well. He has already left for Philadelphia by the early train. He was anxious that you should know this."

"Thank you very much," Philip murmured, a little dazed.

He sprang out of bed, dressed quickly, hurried over his coffee and rolls, boarded a cross-town car, and arrived at the Monmouth House flats just in time to meet Martha Grimes issuing into the street. She was not at all the same Martha. She was very neatly dressed, her shoes were nicely polished, her clothes well brushed, her gloves new, and she wore a bunch of fresh-looking violets in her waistband. She started in surprise as Philip accosted her.

"Whatever are you doing back in the slums?" she demanded. "Any fresh trouble?"

"Nothing particular," Philip replied, turning round and falling into step with her. "I can't see why that's any way, and I want to talk to you. You're the most human person I know, and you understand things. Listen!"

"Gee!" she smiled. "This is the lion and the mouse, with a vengeance. You can walk with me, if you like, as far as the block before the theatre. I'm not going to arrive there with you, and I tell you so straight."

"No followers, eh?"

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1919, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

THE girl who takes all a man's tender speeches seriously would probably go to a musical comedy in order to improve her mind.

A woman forms her opinion of herself from what she sees in her mirror; a man forms his opinion of himself from what he sees in woman's eyes.

Where are all the old "experts" who used to declare that a woman ought to be able to dress like a perfect lady on sixty dollars a year. Dear me! With clothes selling by the carat, any woman who wore only sixty dollars' worth wouldn't BE a lady!

It is not wise for a man to marry his first love. He has to be "seasoned" for matrimony. Like eating nine olives, loving nine women cultivates your taste and teaches you to appreciate one of them.

When a man answers his wife's "How do I look?" dear with the usual "Oh, all right, all right!" she feels about as thrilled and elated as an actor who reads in the morning paper that he "did acceptably."

The only sure way to tell a mushroom from a toadstool is by eating it; and, alas, by that same token, the only sure way to tell whether a man will make you happy or miserable is by marrying him.

Some of the newest evening gowns seem awfully low in the front—until you happen to see the back.

In order to be attractive, a woman has to possess some sort of beauty—of face, of figure, of mind or of spirit; but all in the world a man needs to fascinate any woman is a devoted manner. Why isn't the world FULL of Princes Charming?

Every married man is an "out-law" to his "in-laws"!

Regular Habits Produce a Beautful Complexion

Daily elimination rids the system of poisons. Women should realize that!

MANY women complain daily of their complexion, of their headaches and general ill health, little realizing that the trouble is constipation. Women, too, are much more subject to such congestion than men, and much more careless of it. The result is seen in lusterless, weary eyes, in sallow, pimply complexion, in lassitude, bad breath, in fact word so often used, "indisposed."

At the first sign of these symptoms the wise woman will take a laxative, and will see that the young girl and others in her care do likewise. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite with thousands of women because it is mild and gentle in its action and in the end trains the stomach and bowel muscles to do their work naturally without the aid of medicine.

This combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, which can be bought at any drug store, is also a very sterling first-aid in colds, fevers and other sudden ills that make it advisable to always have a bottle in the home. It is pure, effective and safe for the tiniest baby.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there are over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 511 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

Allays Inflammation and Restores Normal Action.

Just a simple extract of green corn silk—compounded with other simple, well-known drugs, seems to bring relief in the treatment of Kidney and Bladder disorders that might almost be classed as miraculous. Congestion and inflammation of the kidneys and bladder cause untold distress. The soothing, balmy effect of Balmwort Tablets are noticed quickly as the inflammation is allayed and the organs are toned up to act as nature intended.

The Valley of the Giants

By Peter B. Kyne

NEEDLESS to relate, this report had a most amazing effect upon Colonel Pennington, and when at length he could not recover his mental equilibrium he set about quite calmly to analyze the report, word by word and sentence by sentence, with the result that he promptly arrived at the following conclusion:

His Conclusion

(1) His niece, Shirley Sumner, was not to be trusted in so far as young Bryce Cardigan was concerned. Despite her assumption of hostility toward the fellow since that memorable day in Pennington's woods, the Colonel was now fully convinced that she had made her peace with him and had been the recipient of his secret attentions right along. The Colonel was on the verge of calling his niece up to demand an explanation, but on second thought decided to wait a few days and see what his gum-shoe men might have to report further.

(2) The N. C. O. was still a mystery, but a mystery in which Bryce Cardigan was interested. Moreover, he was anxious to aid the N. C. O. in every way possible. However the Colonel could understand this. Cardigan would aid anything that might possibly tend to lift the Cardigan lumber interests from under the iron heel of Colonel Pennington, and he was just young enough and unsophisticated enough to be fooled by that Trinidad Redwood Timber gang.

(3) The N. C. O. was going to make a mighty bluff, even to the extent of applying for a franchise to run over the city streets of Sequoia. Hence Ogilvy's visit to Mayor Poundstone—doubtless on the advice of Bryce Cardigan. Hence, also, his visit to young Henry Poundstone, whom he had doubtless engaged as his legal representative in order to ingratiate himself with the young man's father. Coarse work!

Small Leather Bag

(4) Ogilvy had carried a small leather bag to and from Henry Poundstone's office. That bag was readily explained. It had contained a bribe in gold coin and young Henry had been selected as the go-between. That meant that Mayor Poundstone had agreed to deliver the franchise—for a consideration; and like the smooth scoundrel he was, he wanted his bit in gold coin, which could not be marked without the marks being discovered! Ogilvy had called first on the Mayor to arrange the details; then he had called on the Mayor's son to complete the transaction.

(5) If a franchise had been arranged for and the bribe already delivered, that meant the prompt and unadvertised commencement of operations. Where (the Colonel asked hifself) would these operations begin? Why, close to the waterfront, where materials could be landed from the steamer that brought them to Sequoia. At whose mill-dock would those materials be discharged? Why, Cardigan's docks, of course. Ogilvy had probably settled first on Cardigan to arrange that detail. Yes, the N. C. O. was going to carry its monumental bluff to the point of building a mile of track through the town. * * * No-no, they wouldn't spend that much money on a bluff; they wouldn't bribe Poundstone unless the road was meant. And was it a common carrier, after all? Had Cardigan in some mysterious manner managed to borrow enough money to parallel the Laguna Grande Lumber Company's logging-road, and was he disguising it as a common carrier?

The trail was growing hot; the Colonel mopped his brow and concentrated further. If the N. C. O. was really going to start operations, in order to move its material from the Cardigan dock to the scene of operations it would have to cut his (the Colonel's) tracks somewhere on Water street, Damnation! That was it. They were trying to slip one over on him. They were planning to get a jump-crossing in before he should awake to the situation; they were planning, too, to have the city council slip through the franchise when nobody was looking, and once the crossing should be in, they could laugh at Colonel Pennington!

Playing the Game

"The scoundrels!" he murmured.

"I'm on to them! Cardigan is playing the game with them. That's why he bought those rails from the old Laurel Creek spur! Oh, the sly young fox—quoting that portion of our hauling contract which stipulates that all spurs and extensions of my road, once it enters Cardigan's land's, must be made at Cardigan's expense! And to fool me into thinking he wanted those rails for an extension of his logging-system. Oh, what a blithering idiot I have been! However, it's not too late yet. Poundstone is coming over to dinner Thursday night, and I'll wring the swine dry before he leaves the house. And as for those rails Cardigan managed to hornswoggle me out of——"

He seized the telephone and fairly shouted to his exchange operator to get his woods-foreman, Jules Rondeau, on the line.

"That you, Rondeau?" he shouted when the big French Canadian responded. "Pennington talking. What has young Cardigan done about those rails I sold him from the abandoned spur up Laurel Creek?"

"He have two flat-cars upon se spur now. Dose woods-gang of hees she tear up dose rails from se head of se spur and load in se flat-cars."

"No, she don't leave yet."

"See to it, Rondeau, that they do not leave until I give the word. Understand? Cardigan's woods-boys will call you up and ask you to send a switch-engine up to snake them out into this afternoon or tomorrow afternoon. Tell him the switch-engine is in the shop for repairs or is busy at other work—anything that will stall him off and delay delivery."

"Suppose Bryce Cardigan, she comes around and say 'Why?'" Rondeau queried cautiously.

"Kill him," the Colonel retorted coolly. "It strikes me you and the Black Mirrors are rather slow playing even with young Cardigan."

Rondeau grunted. "I theenk mebbe so you kill heem yourself, boss," he replied enigmatically, and hung up.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE dictagraph which Shirley had asked Bryce to obtain for her in San Francisco arrived on the regular passenger-steamer on Thursday morning and she called her up to ask when she desired it sent over.

"Good morning," Mr. Cardigan," she greeted him cheerily. "How do you feel this morning? Any the worse for having permitted yourself to be a human being last night?"

"Why, I feel pretty fine, Shirley. I think it did me a lot of good to crawl out of my shell last night."

"You feel encouraged to go on living, eh?"

"Yes."

"And fighting?"

"By All means."

"Then something has occurred of late to give you new courage?"

"Oh, many things. Didn't I give an exhibition of my courage in accepting Ogilvy's invitations to dinner knowing that you were going to be there?"

She did not like that. "You carry your frankness to extremes, my friend," she retorted. "I'm sure I've always been much nicer to you than you deserve."

"Nevertheless there wasn't any valid reason why I should tantalize myself last night."

"Then why did you come?" He had a suspicion that she was laughing silently at him.

"Partly to please Ogilvy, who has fallen head over heels in love with Moira; partly to please Moira, who wanted me to meet you, but mostly to please myself, because, while I dreaded it, nevertheless I wanted to see you again. I comforted myself with the thought that for the sake of appearances we dared not quarrel in the presence of Moira and my friend Ogilvy, and I dare say you felt the same way. At any rate, I have seldom had more enjoyment when partaking of a meal with an enemy."

"Please do not say that," she answered. "I am your opponent, but not your enemy."

"That's nice of you. By the way, Shirley, you may inform your uncle at breakfast Friday morning about my connection with the N. C. O. In fact, I think it would be far better for you if you made it a point to do so."

"Why?"

Detectives on Trail

"Because both Ogilvy and myself have a very strong suspicion that your uncle has a detective or two on our trails. There was a strange man rather prevalent around him all day yesterday and I noticed a fellow following my car last night. He was on a bicycle and followed me home. I communicated my suspicions to shake the same man off his trail—and couldn't. So I judge your uncle will learn today that you dined with Ogilvy, Moira, and me last night."

"Oh, dear! That's terrible." He could sense her distress.

"Ashamed of having been seen in my company, eh?"

"Please don't. Are you quite serious in this matter?"

"Quite."

"Uncle Seth will think it so—so strange."

"He'll probably tell you about it. Better beat him to the issue by 'fessing up, Shirley. Doubtless his suspicions are already aroused, and if you inform him that you know I am the real builder of the N. C. O., he'll think you're a smart woman and that you've been doing a little private gum-shoe work of your own on behalf of the Laguna Grande Lumber Company."

"Which is exactly what I have been doing," she reminded him.

"I know. But then, I'm not afraid of you, Shirley—that is, any more. And after Friday morning I'll not be afraid of your uncle. So tell him at breakfast. Then watch to see if it affects his appetite."

"Oh, dear! I feel as if I were a conspirator."

"I believe you are one. Your dictagraph has arrived. Shall I send George Bea Otter over with it? And have you somebody to install it?"

"Oh, bother! Does it have to be installed?"

"It does. You place the contraption—hide it, rather—in the room where the conspirators congregate; then you run wires from it into another room and the detectives listen in on the receivers."

A Dictagraph

"Could George Sea Otter install it?"

"I think he could. There is a printed card of instructions, and I dare say George would find the job no more baffling than the ignition-system on the Napier."

"Will he tell anybody?"

Not if you ask him not to."

"Not even a whisper to himself, Shirley."

"Very well, then. Please send him over. Thank you so much, Bryce Cardigan. You're an awful good old sort, after all. Really, it hurts me to have to oppose you. It would be so much nicer if we didn't have all those redwood trees to protect, wouldn't it?"

"Let us not argue the question, Shirley. I think I have my redwood trees protected. Good-bye."

PRICES LOWER IN BOSTON

Trading Dull and Narrow on Exchange; Curb Oils Recede

Mixed as to changes at the start, prices soon sought a lower level on the Boston Stock Exchange and the market was weak during the morning. The downward movement was slight, however. The range was limited and the market narrow. Many issues opened unchanged and quite a few stayed so all the forenoon. Nothing unusual enlivened trading. Money is very tight in this financial centre and there are no signs of an immediate alteration of the situation.

Gains of a point or more were made before noon by Mohawk, St. Mary's Land, Torrington, Walworth, and Agricultural Chemical. In the case of each the advance was made on a solitary transaction. Smaller gains were made by Mayflower, National Leather, Nippissing and Eastern Manufacturing.

Stocks to decline a point or more were United Fruit, Libby, and Gray & Davis, while smaller recessions were shown by Calumet and Arizona, East Butte, North Butte, New Cornelia, Swift, International, Root and Van Dervoort, Elder, Carson Hill, United Shoe, New Haven, and Boston & Maine.

PRICES LOWER ON CURB.

The Curb had a quiet start and was rather dull during the morning. Oils were lower in most instances and prices in general had a receding tendency. Strong stocks at the opening were Cosden, Allied Oil, Pilgrim, Midway, Texana and Verde Mines. Weak ones included Arizona Extension, Seven Metals, Silver Reef, Simms Petroleum, White Oil and Hendee.

At the end of an hour Arizona Extension was up 1 cent at 17 cents, while Simms was off 1 at 43, Gilliland 1 at 39, White ⅛ at 31⅛, Hendee ¼ at 38¼ and Hecla Divide 2 cents at 8 cents.

New York Sub-Treasury Gain

New York, Feb. 9.—The sub-treasury gained $402,000 from the banks on Saturday, making the cash net gain since Friday $1,520,000.

STEEL IS KEPT UNDER PAR

Market Reacts Quickly and Fails to Rally During the Morning

Stocks were weak in New York at noon and the majority at about their lowest of the morning. The market reacted again in the second hour. Weakest stocks were Mexican Petroleum, Texas Co., General Motors, Studebaker, American International, Atlantic Gulf, Marine preferred, Woolen common, Goodrich, Kelly Springfield and Industrial Alcohol. They had receded from two to about five points, with General Motors showing the largest loss.

Among steels, U. S. Steel was off more than a point. Republic was lower and Crucible showed a small gain. U. S. Steel was seldom above par during the morning.

The market was quiet and trading of less than usual volume. Call money renewed at 14 per cent. Sterling exchange opened at $3.35¾ and later was quoted at $3.36¼. The franc rate was 14.47; the lire rate 18.52. German marks were steady at .0104.

EARLY TREND WAS INDEFINITE.

Prices had an irregular movement at the opening and weakened at once. They eased off from fractions to two points. Over Sunday buying from the outside was small, and the covering movement seemed to have culminated temporarily on Saturday. Within a few minutes there was considerable selling pressure. While there was brief improvement during the first hour, the undertone was not good, and the market was weak on the whole at the end of that period. Some issues were showing large losses, including Endicott-Johnson and Atlantic Gulf. Oils were the weakest class, and steels showed the most resistance, although Crucible and Republic declined a point or more within a few minutes and U. S. Steel again sold below par. Among weakest oils were Mexican Petroleum, Texas Co. and Middle States. Gains were few and fractional up to the middle of the morning.

MONEY CAUSING CONCERN.

No change in the money situation was reported and scarcity of funds was the chief cause of concern. The New York statement by clearing house banks was rather encouraging, but the reserve ratio of the New York Federal Reserve Bank had dropped in a week from 40.3 per cent. to 39.7 per cent. Its gold reserve decreased more than $19,000,000 and its total reserve about as much. The advance of sterling at the opening of the foreign exchange market did not have much influence upon stocks. Belief obtains that the foreign exchange has not touched bottom even with exports contracting. Compared with November exports to the United Kingdom, France and Belgium decreased $22,000,000 in December and for all Europe there was a decrease of $57,000,000. But shipments to the Orient increased. The high renewal rate on call loans was the chief bear factor this morning, as it has been for several weeks.

WORLD SUGAR SHORTAGE THREE MILLION TONS

It is estimated that the world will be nearly three million tons short of its sugar requirements for this year; there is little hope of any reduction in the price paid by consumers. Such authorities as Willett and Gray estimate production of 15,826,596 tons only. The world output for the last pre-war season was 18,667,399 tons. It is figured that this season's output will be 516,339 tons less than it was last season. The shrinkage will be European. One sugar man says:

"The beet sugar output of Germany this year is estimated at about 750,000 tons, against 2,700,000 tons before the war, Czecho-Slovakia will probably produce less than 700,000 tons, compared with about 1,700,000 tons before the war. The total decline in European beet sugar production is not more than 5,000,000 tons, from 8,222,176 tons in 1913-1914 to 2,894,000 tons in 1919-1920."

Higher Steel Prices

The advance of last week took steel prices to the highest level in nearly three years, an average increase of $4.75 a ton being recorded for eight leading products. There is no fear in the steel trade that the foreign exchange situation will curtail its operations in this country. Only about 10 per cent. of American iron and steel has been exported in the past. The domestic demand will keep mills going at full blast here whether or not there is any foreign buying.

More Gold for China

Gold coin amounting to $260,000 has been transferred from New York to the San Francisco Sub-Treasury for shipment to China. Gold bars valued at $68,953 have been engaged in New York for shipment to Switzerland.

Foreign Buying of Copper

It is figured that during the last two months of 1919 European and Japanese buying of copper in the American market totalled about 150,000,000 pounds. No estimates of foreign buying in January this year have been made public. Owing to the money exchange situation it is believed that this demand has greatly decreased this year.

Wall Street Briefs

January sales by F. W. Woolworth Co. stores aggregated $8,491,208, as compared with $7,127,859 in January a year ago, a gain of 19.13 per cent.

For 1919 the Buckeye Pipe Line Co. reports net income of $1,664,762, against $1,715,861 in 1918.

Last year's net of the Northern Pipe Line Co. was $416,777, equivalent to $10.41 a share earned on the $4,000,000 stock, against $503,284, or $12.58 a share in the preceding year.

The People's Gas Light and Coke Co. of Chicago reports for 1919 gross receipts of $24,343,798, against $21,588,400 in 1918, and a surplus, after depreciation, interest, etc., of $65,208, against a deficit of $1,366,628 in the previous year.

Net profits by the General Motors Corporation for the third quarter of 1919 amounted, after Federal taxes, to $15,314,476, against $13,579,019 in the second quarter and $17,815,145 in the first three months.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Feb. 9.—In sympathy with higher cables and more favorable foreign exchange quotations the cotton market was firmer at the opening, with prices 15 to 33 points net higher. Selling pressure developed, however, led by the South and spot houses, forcing sharp reactions to Saturday's closing levels. Opening prices were: March, 35.00; May, 32.80; July, 31.00; October, 29.00; December, 28.45; January, 28.40.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Corn opened ⅝c to 8¼c lower. Oats made ½c to 1c lower. Provisions opened 5c to 7½c higher. Opening prices were: Corn—May, 1.27½ to 1.28¼; July, 1.22½ to 1.23½. Oats—May, 74⅝ to 75; July, 67⅝ to 68. Lard—May, 21.40; July, 21.90.

A Message To the American Public

From J. Ogden Armour
President, Armour and Company

For some time we have had a thought with which we have wanted to acquaint the American public, and it concerns the future of Armour and Company.

From a small beginning sixty years ago, serving a few people locally and under the management of the Armour family, we have expanded to a point where we now serve many millions of people all over the world.

We have come to the view that a wide distribution of ownership of any corporation serving a large number of people is of advantage not only in maintaining the human relation between employer and employe but between those from whom it buys and those to whom it sells.

Realizing that a business of the character of ours is so necessary to the public, we believe they should be accorded the privilege of participating in its ownership. As a beginning, two years ago, we offered our debentures, which were exchangeable into preferred stock. As a result, we now have eleven thousand preferred stockholders.

With the thought in mind of further public participation we have decided to segregate our leather properties. The announcement of the offering of preferred and common stock of the Armour Leather Company will be made in this paper tomorrow.

J. OGDEN ARMOUR

Stransky Began His Career as Physician

JOSEF STRANSKY.

Boston Czecho-Slovaks, of whom there are several thousand, are exhibiting great interest in the visit to Symphony Hall, Tuesday, February 17, of the greatest orchestra conductor of their race—Josef Stransky—who leads the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Stransky has been noted for his attitude as a patriotic Bohemian since the European war started. Like all Czechs, he bitterly opposed the drafting into the Austrian army of hundreds of thousands of his countrymen, and he was very active in the work of Bohemian aid.

When the Czecho-Slovak Republic was established Stransky gave a concert of Czech music in the Metropolitan Opera House, at which the newly elected president, Dr. Marsark, was present, and all the prominent representatives of the race in New York.

As an exponent of the great Bohemian composers, Smetana and Dvorak, he has no equal.

Stransky was born in Bohemia and educated at Prague. He studied medicine and was a full fledged doctor before he began to conduct opera and concert. His reputation as a conductor grew rapidly. He conducted the leading orchestras of Germany before he was called to the New York Philharmonic to succeed the great Gustav Mahler who was returning to Vienna.

For nine years the Czech conductor has led New York's greatest orchestra. During this time he has built and developed the orchestra until it has become one of the three great orchestras of the world. Not a man was lost from the Philharmonic as a result of the United States entering the war for every member was an American citizen. Naturally there is a large representation of Czecho-Slovaks in the orchestra.

RUSSIAN DANCER OPENS STUDIO

Gavrilov, Wounded in War, to Give Lessons in Boston

When the Nijinsky Russian ballet played Boston three seasons ago, the leading male dancer, next to Nijinsky himself, was Gavrilov. When Nijinsky sprained his ankle Gavrilov danced most of his roles.

This great Russian dancer has settled in Boston and opened a studio on Huntington avenue, at Gainsboro street, where he will teach dancing.

Gavrilov, despite his Russian name, is a wounded American soldier. He enlisted in the 42nd Engineers of the United States Army when the war broke out and saw service on the Western front. He went in as a private and come out a sergeant with several wounds. His injuries prevented his resuming his career as a dancer, at least for a time, and the army surgeons advised him to confine himself to teaching for a year or two.

Gavrilov played at the Boston Opera House during the last engagement of the Russian ballet and will be readily remembered by Boston people who saw that great troupe.

He was born in New York, but went to Russia with his parents as a child and there joined the Imperial Ballet at St. Petersburg. He toured Europe with the great troupe which included Pavlowa, Nijinski, Nordkin, Karsovina and the Fokines.

YSAYE AND ELMAN IN NOTABLE PROGRAM

A joint concert by two masters of the violin, Eugene Ysaye and Mischa Elman, was given last evening at Symphony Hall. There was special interest in the concert, it being the first appearance this season of Ysaye in Boston, he having recently conducted the Symphony Orchestra at Cincinnati. It will also be some time before Elman will again appear in Boston.

The program was a varied one and greatly enjoyed by a large audience. The concerto in D minor by Bach gave each artist an opportunity to execute their delicate technique. The program was as follows:

Concertante, D major .... Mozart
Concertante, F major .... Molique
(Cadenza by Ysaye)
Concerto, D minor .... Bach
Six Duets .... Godard
(1, Pastorale; 2, Tristesse; 3, Abandon; 4, Berceuse; 5, Minuet; 6, Serenade.)

Why Should United States Pay Great Britain's War Debt?

We have just happened upon a remarkable letter written by Henry A. Wise Wood of New York to Congressman Tinkham of Massachusetts, and by him caused to be printed in the Congressional Record, long before Sir George Paish visited this country in search of his "staggering loan" for England. Everyone ought to read this letter. It is as follows:

The following incident may throw some light upon the cause of the advocacy of the projected League of Nations, which is so pronounced in influential financial circles. I relate it precisely as it occurred.

Early last May there called upon me at my office a Mr. J. J. O'Neill, whose engraved card described him as London manager of the Manchester Guardian, of Manchester, England. Mr. O'Neill, who was a stranger to me, immediately introduced the subject of the League of Nations and took me to task because of my opposition to that project. Upon inquiring of him why an Englishman should be in this country instructing an American in the latter's national duty and receiving no clear answer, I asked him bluntly what was the actual purpose of his visit to the United States. He replied that he was here upon a mission connected with the internationalization of the war debt. I asked him if he meant me to understand that he was here upon the business of inducing the United States to guarantee the war debts of the nations recently at war, including that of Great Britain and that of Germany. He said that he was. I told him that he would find little sentiment in this country favorable to such a project. This seemed to surprise him. He said that I was the first American he had met who did not favor it. I then asked him whom he had seen, and he replied that upon the previous day he had seen Mr. J. P. Morgan, and that Mr. Morgan had expressed himself as being in favor of the plan.

Whether this was or was not a correct statement of Mr. Morgan's position I have no means of knowing. But it might be valuable at this time to inquire publicly what plans, if any, are afoot to induce Europe's proposed new partner, the United States, to assume the obligations of the financially hard-hit members of the projected co-partnership, who are about to open the business of pooling their troubles under the title of the League of Nations.

The British war debt is one of the most stupendous things in the world. According to this letter there is a campaign on foot to get America to guarantee this enormous debt. This debt almost beggars description. We believe that the interest on it alone exceeds the entire expenses of the government before the war. We also understand that the entire British income, in spite of the enormous taxes, is not able by a very large margin to pay the interest on the British debt and the current governmental expenses. In other words, Great Britain is going into bankruptcy at her present rate of income and expenditure. So serious is the situation that all classes in England are discussing the advisability of what is called a "capital levy."

A capital levy, as it is understood in Great Britain, we believe, is the seizure by the government of a part of each man's wealth for the purpose of paying the government debt. At any other time such a suggestion would be hailed as robbery, anarchy, Bolshevism, and all other kinds of names, but so great is the British debt and so inadequate is the power of ordinary taxation to meet it that all classes in England are discussing the proposed capital levy and, indeed are practically agreed that it must be made, provided, of course, that it cannot be palmed off upon the United States with the same ease with which we were made to guarantee the boundaries of the British Empire with our blood and treasure under the proposed League of Nations and to give the British six votes to our one under that same league.

The only dispute which is now serious in England concerning the capital levy is whether the levy shall be made upon the fortunes accumulated during this war or whether they shall be upon the fortunes accumulated in all wars and under all circumstances. Those who made their money before the war naturally want those who made their money during the war to pay, and those who made their money during the war naturally want everybody to pay and pay alike.

Of course, if through the subtle agencies of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., scattered throughout the country, a propaganda in favor of our assuming this British war debt, or part of it, were successful, the British lion would lick his chops and close one eye with more than usual unction and could repeat, with the satisfaction of the London Daily Mail, the statement that as the result of the war a British subject could walk from one end of Africa to the other upon British territory. The London Daily Mail might also add that as the result of the war Great Britain also gets another large slice of Asia, the largest continent of the earth.

The United States gets no benefit from the great war she won for the allies, and wants none, but why should the United States assume all the burdens? Isn't it enough to have saved Great Britain from destruction? Why should we now be asked to guarantee Great Britain in her enormous conquests and to aid her in holding down the hundreds of millions of conquered people who are chafing under her misrule? Why should we be asked to help her pay her immense debts? Why should we be asked to help her build her merchant marine, the prime object of which is to drive our merchant marine off the seas? Why should we be asked to help her build the mightiest navy that has ever been constructed when we know perfectly well that the great guns of that British navy will some day again be trained on our coast capitals?

The proposal is wholly unreasonable, absolutely un-American and, in the last analysis, it will be found that those who are in favor of such proposals are not Americans at all, but the agents and tools of English political and financial influences.

New Police Force Stands Test

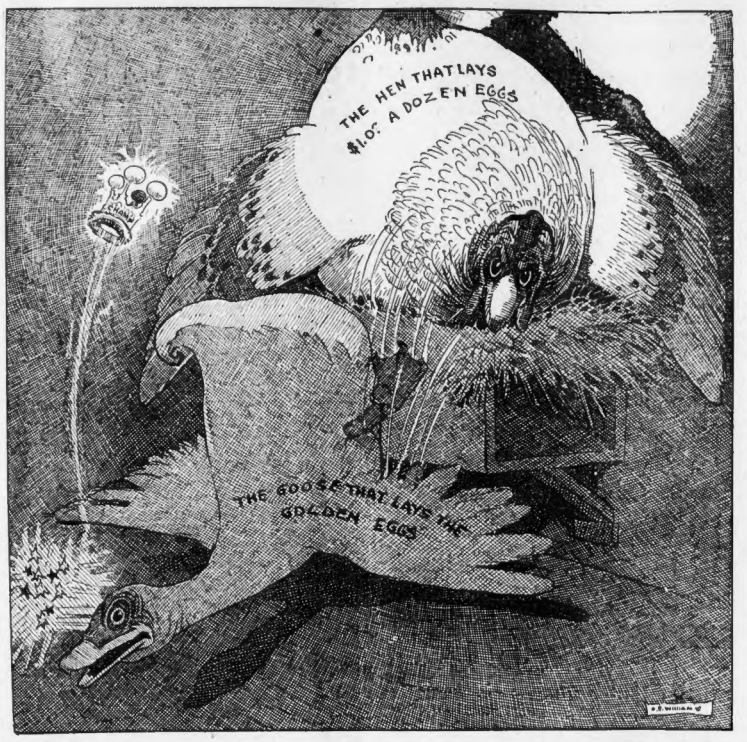
Boston's new police force has, in a most surprising way, shown itself equal to the task of coping with situations such as this city has seldom experienced. Not for many years has Boston been so brutally treated by the elements. Snow has fallen to a degree not experienced since 1898.

And throughout the trying days, days laden with trouble of every imaginable sort for vehicular and foot traffic, the new policeman has stood the test. His resourcefulness has more than once eliminated tangles which for a time bade fair to seriously impede the orderly conduct of business in Boston's streets.

Stalled pungs and teams have profited as a result of his judgment. Those who have had to walk have been afforded every courtesy and helped in their efforts at making progress.

The police force is young and to a degree untried. But withal it has demonstrated that it has the ability to cope with unusual situations. A majority of its members received their education in the fields of France. They profited by their teachings. And in the end Boston will profit by them.

Killing the Goose



More Truth Than Poetry

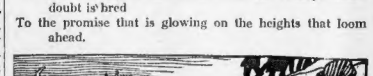
ON THE MARCH

By S. E. KISER

We who still possess the courage to be free in soul and mind,
We who leave old superstitions and old hindrances behind,
Have become a mighty army that gains wisdom as it grows,
And across our stainless banner the sublime word "Progress" glows.
We are casting out false leaders who have put our faith to shame;
We have ceased to heed their warnings and no longer fear their blame.

We are soldiers who have battled for the right to think and see,
And our sacred oath is, "Service, where our spirits may be free!"
We have passed the gaping caverns where the snarling broods of greed
Gnaw the lean flesh of their victims, and our ban is on their breed.
"Progress" glows upon the banner that above our column flies,
And the glow of honor shimmers where the distant ranges rise.

We have risen from the bondage of fantastic class and caste
And are throwing off the burdens that have bent us in the past;
We are leaving them to wallow in the darkness and the slime
Who get ready-made opinions and are merely serving Time.
We are marching onward boldly from the swamps where doubt is bred
To the promise that is glowing on the heights that loom ahead.



USUALLY HE FINDS IT

The man who starts out to find trouble hardly ever happens to get on the wrong road.

KEEP SMILING

Although the Winter's cold, there still
Is hope to which we all may cling;
A farmer down near Pumpkinville
Allows we'll have an early Spring.

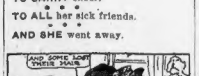
SHE'S A nice woman.
AND I know her husband.
AND HE'S a merchant.
AND HAS a lot of windows.
THAT ARE full of figures.
MADE FROM wax.
AND I will say.
THEY'RE THE swellest wax figures.
I EVER saw.
AND HE'S a good picker.
AND HE did well.
WHEN HE picked his wife.
EXCEPT THAT she talks.
AND WHILE I was sick.
SHE CAME to see me.
AND STARTED right in.
TO TELL me the story.
ABOUT ALL the sick persons.
SHE'D EVER visited.
AND HOW many had died.
AND HOW many got well.
AND SOME were left blind.
AND SOME lost their hair.
AND SOME were left deaf.
AND I must be careful.
BECAUSE ONE never could tell.
AND THERE was so much sickness.
AND IF I got well.
WOULD I like some jam.
BECAUSE SHE'D put up a lot.
AND I said I would.
BUT SHE'D better not send it.
UNTIL I was sure.
I WAS going to get better.
AND SHE said maybe not.
AND AFTER that.
WE HAD a long discussion.
ABOUT CREMATION.
AND WHAT did I think.
AND IF it wasn't better.
TO LET the relatives.
DO WHATEVER they liked.
BECAUSE AFTER all.
IT COULD make no difference.

TO THE person who'd died.
AND SHE knew a woman.
WHO HAD recently died.
AND HAD been cremated.
IN THE best clothes she had.
AND DIDN'T I think.
SHE SHOULDN'T have done it.
BECAUSE SHE had sisters.
AND WITH prices so high.
IT DID seem a crime.
TO BURN up clothes.
AND ALONG about then.
SHE HAD my wife crying.
AND MY temperature was up.
AND I was red in the face.
AND SHE was so sorry.
THAT MY wife was crying.
AND SHE must cheer up.
BECAUSE AFTER all.
WHAT WAS to be.
JUST HAD to be.
AND OF course I'd get well.
AND SHE'D send over some jam.
AND DID I want plum.
AND SHE had to hurry.
BECAUSE HER husband's partner.
HAD A very sick wife.
AND SHE had to go there.
BECAUSE SHE felt it her duty.
TO CARRY cheer.
TO ALL her sick friends.
AND SHE went away.



THANK you.

PEOPLE WHO DWELL ON DARK SIDE OF LIFE

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

DID you ever stop to consider the things you say? Just take a day—any old day will do—and keep tab on yourself. The results will be a surprise to you.

Unless some unexpected windfall has tumbled down from the blue into your lap, or that long-expected ship of yours has at last sailed proudly into port, you will find that you have indulged in a good many more negatives than affirmatives.

Here are a few samples. "I am not feeling well at all." "Nothing good ever happens to me." "I was born unlucky." "I am getting poorer every day." "Everything is going wrong." And so on indefinitely.

It is easier to think of our woes than our blessings, easier to talk about them; and so we do perpetually.

We Must Give to Get

"We cannot ask everything of the world and give nothing. That is greedy. And the biggest and most precious things we can give are cheerfulness and courage. In paying that debt, too, we are greatly enriching ourselves; for no matter what our own particular difficulties are, there is always a way out.

Some one had a genuine inspiration when he said: "There seemed nothing to do but go to the wall; so I went to the wall, and there I found a door."

The first letter which I opened this morning was written almost entirely in negatives.

"I am a poor little girl who needs help," it ran. "I am only nineteen and the mother of a beautiful baby. But my husband objects to my ever leaving the house, even to take the air. He has plenty of good clothes and goes out every evening, but he says I do not need clothes, as I don't go anywhere, and that anyhow a woman's place is in the home and she should stay there. If I complain, it makes scenes. I am a fine stenographer and earned a good living before I was married, but now I am the unhappiest little mother in the world."

Assert Yourself

Stop thinking of yourself in negatives. Look at the affirmative side of your problem. You are young. You are able to make a good living. You do not have to accept for either yourself or your child the conditions under which you are living.

Announce your position, therefore, and stand by it; and the probability is that your husband, being a bully and consequently a coward, will speedily alter his attitude.

Letters to the Editor

Italians Revere Lincoln

Editor Boston American:

I have just read your editorial, "Mr. Wilson Rejects Another American Tradition." I am glad to see you point out in this and other editorials that France and England are anybody's friends when they need help, while Italy and America are friends of long standing because of their common sincere, lofty ideals.

I wish to state to you, because I am in a position to know, that Lincoln's words, as you reproduce them, have been read and reread many times by Italians both in this country and in Italy. We know what America is, and we therefore do not let the opinions or the doings of one man interfere between the ties of friendship between Italy and America.

Every Italian who has read and will read the above editorial feels grateful to you for telling your readers what the great martyr President felt for Italy.

A Religious Milestone Talk, but Very Softly England Waking Up France, Also

—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1920.

The Church Peace Union announces a commission of three, one Catholic, one Protestant, one Jew, to visit Mexico and bring about friendly relations. Those who know Mexico, say something more energetic is needed there. Mexican statesmen still believe that they could beat the United States easily, if it were not for Texas. They have tried it in Texas.

The Catholic-Protestant-Jewish commission to Mexico is interesting, historically, as a milestone indicating progress. Not long ago it would have been a pleasure for the Catholic to burn the Protestant, or for the Protestant to burn the Catholic, as Calvin burned Servetus. And if anything could have persuaded the Protestant and Catholic to postpone the burning of each other, it would have been a suggestion that they united in burning the Jew. They don't do that any more, officially.

Abraham Lincoln said that when the people didn't like their government they had a right to change it. But he engineered an effort to change government positions that was not exactly peaceful.

We agree now, with our modern sedition laws, that if you don't like anything about your government, you must talk about it gently and politely but that you must talk only and you must talk carefully if you don't want to go to jail. Nothing worse than loud talk for the digestion of a nation or an individual with a full stomach.

In 1776 they ignored that gentle, polite talk rule and changed governments rudely. The fact is that, now as always, if you try to change your government, no matter how, and fail, you are a traitor, an anarchist and the law fixes you. If you succeed, you are a patriot and live in bronze after you are dead. Franklin said "We must hang together, or hang separately."

It is fair to those who would like to live in bronze to warn them that this is a poor time for the realization of any such dream, via the road of government overthrow.

A radical orator shouted: "A million radicals will rise and show their power." A soldier in the hall replied: "Then a hundred million Americans will rise and lick them." The soldier understood the American of 1920 better than the radical orator.

Much of the patriotic demand that "every dead American soldier be brought home and buried in American soil" started, it seems, among undertakers willing to bury many dead soldiers for profit. We live in a practical age. As far as possible the wishes of relatives should be considered by the government. But this extract from an English poem about the burial of Sir John Moore seems to fit the situation:

"Lightly they'll speak of the spirit that's gone, and o'er his cold ashes upbraid him.
"But little he'll reck if they let him sleep on in the grave where a Britain has laid him."

The grave, wherever it be, that a man finds while fighting for his country, is an honorable resting place.

Asquith, who was Prime Minister when war broke out, advises the allies to take ten thousand million dollars from the Germans and charge the rest of the indemnity to profit and loss. Lloyd George, who really is the British government, will probably decide to take what Germany can pay, which would be common sense.

Millerand says that France is through with fighting Russia. She can have any kind of government she wants, from Czarism to Sovietism. France has decided that it isn't her business.

Of all nations the French lose infinitely the most by Bolshevik repudiation of the Russian debt. Before the war began there were actually millions of Frenchmen of small means who had invested their small means in Russian bonds in good faith. France loses billions by Russian repudiations.

France also is the nation with the best reason for recognizing Russia's right to govern herself in her own way. Only 130 years ago France, in her revolution, was attacked by the powers of Europe as they recently attacked Russia. And at that time France was beating the powers as Russia lately has been beating her enemies.

There is wonderful force in revolution, for it makes every man think, and a thinking nation is dangerous.
